

Tastier Forage, Bigger Bite Highlight Grazing Research

ANDY ANDREWS

GRANTVILLE (Dauphin Co.)

— At the crest of grazing research, scientists examine the following:

- How cows that take a "bigger bite" of forage can produce more pounds of milk per day.

- How to provide tastier, higher quality plant material that reaches high off the ground, where animals prefer to take their meals.

- How to make more efficient use of those harvesting machines — essentially, the cows that bring home the milk check.

Researchers summarized ways to increase the economic strength of grazing operations Wednesday during the first of a two-day Pennsylvania Grazing and Forage Conference. The conference, sponsored by the Penn State Grazing Research and Education Center and the Pennsylvania Forage and Grassland Council (PFGC), continued Thursday and was attended by approximately 150 graziers and agri-industry representatives at the Grantville Holiday Inn.

The key to increasing the milking capability of that harvest machine is to "allow that cow to take a big mouthful of grass," said Dr. Sinclair Mayne, a scientist at the Agricultural Research Institute of Northern Ireland, at the conference.

Mayne, who spoke about the forage productivity and utilization by ruminants, works out of the Institute based in Hillsborough.

Avian Influenza Confirmed At Two Lancaster Farms

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — The state Department of Agriculture this week confirmed finding on two Lancaster County farms the same avian influenza variety that has continued to appear in the area for more than a year.

Site quarantines have been imposed on both farms, one of which had the disease last May, but went through depopulation and cleaning and disinfection prescribed by the state.

According to state Secretary of Agriculture Samuel Hayes Jr., "We are disappointed and concerned that the virus has appeared again. This stresses the need for maintaining the strictest biosecurity. We must maintain our vigilance."

Both flocks again consisted of laying chickens, as were most of the previous flocks. The flock that had a return visit of the disease consisted of 100,000 birds, while the second flock consisted of 92,000 birds.

"Oliver, can I tempt you with a piece of candy?" That's what little Kyle Walmer, age 5, seems to be asking. Kyle the boy, and Oliver the home bred Percheron/Thoroughbred which measures 17.2 hands, belong to Susan and Sidney Walmer of Foxfield Farm in Reinholds, Lancaster County. At Foxfield they have been working with the Percheron/Thoroughbred cross to gain a combination of athletic ability along with good bone structure and calmness of disposition.

This farm is on the Pennsylvania Horse Farms tour later this month, and Kyle and Oliver posed for the camera to call attention to the event. (See story page A26.)

The huge horse towered over the little boy. But that caused no fear. The scary part was getting up and looking down from on top of that rail fence. Until you get accustomed to such heights, you must hang on for dear life. But in the end, confidence returned. And a fun time was had by everyone involved in taking the picture, including the photographer. Photo by Everett Newswanger, managing editor.

Upcoming Tobacco Referendum Vote

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — The USDA Farm Service Agency this week announced that tobacco growers in various parts of the country will be given an opportunity to vote for tobacco support programs to be in effect for the next three years.

In Lancaster County, the leading tobacco producing county in Pennsylvania, a referendum will be conducted at the Farm Service Agency on March 23-27 between 8 a.m. and 4 p.m. The Farm Service Agency office in Lancaster is located at 1383 Arcadia Road.

Only farmers who grew tobacco in 1997 are eligible to vote in the referendum. Eligibility can be determined by reporting tobacco acres through the time of voting.

If more than two thirds of the growers who vote in Pennsylvania favor the program for the state, then USDA will set quotas for the state and growers will be able to obtain price sup-

USDA-MO Dept Ag Market News
DAILY NATIONAL GRAIN SUMMARY

Wheat bids continued lower, Wednesday, pressured by favorable growing weather in the US winter wheat regions and slow export demand. Corn bids were slightly higher in reaction to Korea's substantial overnight export purchase of US corn. Soybean bids were mixed with some pressure stemming from dry conditions forecast for Brazil and the continued lack of foreign sales. Fund buying on the board, however, limited declines. Wheat steady to 5 cents lower. Corn 1 to 4 cents higher. Sorghum 3 cents higher. Soybeans mixed. U.S. Export Sales: PURCHASERS COMMODITY TONNAGE DEL DATE

Get The Pullet And Layer Feeds That Will Egg You On To Success.

More productive layers. A healthier environment. That's the success you can count on with the innovative pullet and layer feed formulas from Southern States.

These advanced formulas improve productivity by stimulating early feed consumption and a smooth transition from pullet feeds to layer rations that will have your hens laying more profits by the dozen. They also help control excess moisture and reduce phosphorous in manure for a cleaner, healthier environment.

Developed at our Virginia-based division of Cooperative Research Farms (CRF), the world's largest animal nutrition organization, these formulas have been performance tested on a wide variety of today's "new breeds" of leghorn chickens. Plus, with modern, efficient mills in Hagerstown, Md. and Gettysburg, Pa. you're assured access to consistent quality, freshness and competitive pricing.

Gear up your hens for better egg production with the knowledge, service and solutions of Southern States, a leader in poultry nutrition. Call Mike Royal, Manager of Commercial Feed Accounts, today at (804) 281-1261 for more details on the pullet and layer feeds that will egg you on to success.

FULL SAP MOON, MARCH 12.

SUGAR SNOW

With the Full Sap Moon on March 12, we search for signs of the maple sap harvest now under way. Where once we might have seen individual, roofed pails hanging from the tree taps, now we are more likely to see long lines of plastic tubing connecting several maple trees to a single collection point down the hill. While this solution to lugging sap-filled pails down an icy hillside may not be as scenic, still you have to grant its ingenuity. And Nature still calls the shots, with freezing nights and warmer days, or possibly a late "sugar snow" to prolong the sap harvest.

Great discoveries and improvements invariably involve the cooperation of many minds...

- Alexander Graham Bell

Enhance Soil Ability

Pressures on the land to produce food have already become so intense much of the land world-wide has already become degraded. According to John Hebblethwaite, PH.D., writing in Global Food Quarterly, in Indonesia alone, an estimated 200,000 hectares are abandoned each year as degraded land is taken over by useless Imperata grass.

Excess tillage means excessive water runoff. This lost water carries with it topsoil and nutrients that are lost to crop production even as they pollute streams and lakes with pesticide traces, excess nutrients, and bacteria.

In the United States, we believe industry and urban development must share the blame for pollution of the environment. Advanced technology in agriculture has actually reduced the impact of farming on the environment over the last decade.

But in undeveloped countries the solution to the problem of agricultural and environmental sustainability and the solution to the problem of water quality are the same: conserving and enhancing soil quality. Even in our own country and in our own region, high-quality soils with lots of organic matter resist erosion, absorb rainfall, and immobilize agricultural chemicals, wastes, and other pollutants.

The only practical, productive, and fully sustainable answer that mankind has found is low-till farming: conservation tillage and no-till. Conservation tillage reduces, changes, or eliminates tillage to keep enough surface residue on the land to adequately protect the soil from erosion. (Normally, that means keeping at least 30 percent of the crop residue on the soil surface.)

No-till is any farming system that leaves the soil undisturbed from harvest to planting, except for the injection of plant nutrients. Seeding is accomplished in a narrow seedbed or slot created by coulters, disc openers, or other tools.

As we go into the new planting season, you may want to consider what changes you can make in your farm tillage practices that will enhance the natural ability of your soil to hold water and grow crops.

❖ FARM FORUM ❖

Editor,

I have been watching beef cattle prices at our local cattle auction and have discovered a trend that disturbs me.

Each week, there are more dairy cows coming to market than there are beef steers and heifers.

This is a disturbing factor when beef cattle prices are only slightly above the cost of production, especially when cattle-on-feed numbers, according to the (United States Agricultural Statistical Service), are decreasing.

Of course, while this does give the consumer a cheap hamburger meat price at the local supermarket, it does no favor to the beef grower or to the dairyman.

For instance, in last week's market report, cows ranged from a low of $19.50 to a high of $41.50 cwt.

What is perplexing to me is, (Turn to Page A29)

Now Is The Time

To Vote in Tobacco Referendum

The United States Department of Agriculture (USDA) has announced that a tobacco referendum will be conducted March 23 to March 27. The referendum will be conducted at the Farm Service Agency (FSA) offices in counties where tobacco is grown. To be eligible to vote, a person must have grown tobacco during 1997. Farmers can report their tobacco acreage at the time of voting.

If more than two-thirds of the farmers who vote are in favor of the quota program, then USDA will set quotas for the state. Farmers will be able to obtain price support loans and acreage allotments for the next three years based on what they marketed in the past year. Since Pennsylvania grows two types of tobacco, farmers will vote according to the type of tobacco they grow.

date credits. Pesticide update training is conducted under the authority of the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture. They assign credits to meetings held by cooperative extension and agricultural industry.

To receive the most up to date information on meetings being held, call PDA at 1-800-736-6476. This is a toll free number which operates 7 days a week, 24 hours a day. The information is updated weekly. To use this system you need a touch tone phone.

When you call the system, you will need to respond to several questions by pushing a number on your touch tone phone. The information on the recording is the date, number of credits and a phone number to call for more information about the meeting.

To Understand Pesticide License

Many farmers wonder what happens if their pesticide license expires this year and they do not have the required number of credits by the end of March. Private applicators have up to one year to receive the required credits without being required to re-take the examination. However, during this period of time, they may not purchase or apply restricted use pesticides. It is much easier to receive credits each year then wait until the last year.

If you cannot find your pesticide license, call your regional office of Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture and ask to speak to one of the pesticide inspectors. They can tell you the status of your license. If needed, they may make arrangements to have another copy sent to you.

THE ADVANTAGE OF A 'LONELY PLACE'
March 8, 1998

Background Scripture:

Mark 1:21-45

Devotional Reading:

Acts 9:32-42

Can you remember when you were first attracted to Jesus, not because someone else told you who and what he was, but because for yourself you recognized his authority for your life?

When I was a child I went to Sunday School (which I basically didn't like) and worship (which I tolerated) because my parents took me. Experientially, I had always believed in God and I accepted Jesus as God's Son for the same reason I accepted that the world was round — that is what I was taught.

That didn't really change until, as a 9th grader, I began to go steady with a pretty brunette who had just moved to town. She began to tell me about the "great" Youth Fellowship she was attending at a local church. To be with her, I went along to that YF, as we called it. The thing that really hooked me was that these kids could be both devout and a barrel of fun at the same time. When the girl and I "broke up" I continued going.

Then, they told me that, if I really enjoyed the YF, I would love going with some of them to Perkasic, a one-week denominational summer youth camp. I did and I remember well my first day there. I was sure I had made a huge mistake. The park was not all that inviting: an unattractive frame building that doubled as a dining hall and girls' dormitory, a few wooden cottages for the boys and a barn-like, semi-open "Tabernacle" leftover from the emotional camp meeting days.

THE DELL

That evening, however, we had the first of our daily vesper services in the Dell, a simple woodland amphitheater. There was a crude wooden cross and lectern and logs cut in half to provide low seats on the tiers. A Dell tradition was that we would observe silence from the time that we passed the last cottage on the way to the Dell and returned after vespers, except, of course to sing some hymns.

Those who led the service usually did so from behind the assembled group. Otherwise, there was a lot of silence.

There in that beautiful woodland silence, I found that in His life and teachings Jesus spoke to me with an authority that seemed to come directly from God himself. His authority for me no longer came from a book, parent or teacher. I can appreciate, then, why Mark tells us that "they were astonished at His teaching, for He taught them as one who had authority, and not as the scribes" (1:22).

So, when and how did you make that discovery? — assuming you have.

Inspiring as the stories of healing and his ability to command unclean spirits are, it would mean little to me in the long run if I were not able to find him exercising that same kind of power in my own experience. I am eternally thankful for Mark's recounting of these events that speak so winningly of Jesus' power and authority, but without confirmation of this in my own life I do not think I would continue to look to him as my Lord and Master.

WHERE IT STARTS

You see, believing Jesus can do it is not enough. The unclean spirits believed that: "What have you to do with us, Jesus of Nazareth? . . . I know who you are, the Holy One of God" (1:24). Unless we act upon our belief, it is worthless. Eventually, the disciples discovered what the unclean spirits knew. Eventually, I found for myself what the disciples learned. A quiet, lonely place called The Dell was where it all started for me. What about you?

I remember well, if not verbatim, the words of the Dauphin (the French heir apparent) to Joan of Arc in Jean Anouilh's play, The Lark. Complaining bitterly of Joan's visions, "Why doesn't he speak to me?" he wants to know. She replies in effect, "He does speak to you, but you don't listen to him."

Are YOU listening?

Shaping the future with 4-H and FFA.

CoreStates Bank's Agri-Finance Department is proud to support 4-H and FFA members and programs. We believe preserving the family farm is one of the most effective ways to ensure a better future for everyone. So CoreStates is committed to working with young people and supporting their goals.

With guidance and encouragement, they will develop the skills and values they'll need to be successful in farming or wherever their lives take them. And their achievements will benefit us all.

Statewide AI Biosecurity Regulations Not Needed

VERNON ACHENBACH JR.

Lancaster Farming Staff
UNION DEPOSIT (Dauphin Co.) — The announcement this week by the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture of the resurfacing of avian influenza in Lancaster County may well stimulate some unfamiliar with state strategy to call for increased regulations.

However, according to reports given during the Pennsylvania Avian Health Symposium, held Jan. 29 at the Harrisburg Sheraton East, the state doesn't need statewide, specific regulations for biosecurity measures to combat diseases such as avian influenza.

The main reason — the relatively new state Domestic Animal Law gives the state Department of Agriculture additional authorities so that it can, among other things, create case-by-case (farm-by-farm) rules of quarantine specific to an operation and disease.

Were a set of regulations covering biosecurity or quarantine to be adopted, it is more likely that rapid advancements in knowledge of diseases, types of testing, and changes in diseases, all would make the regulations outdated and nonsensical, according to Dr. Bruce Schmucker, an animal health control expert with the PDA.

The Pa. Avian Health Symposium was held for several reasons, not the least to fulfill a request from the state Legislature for information and recommendations in dealing with avian influenza, as well as other infectious poultry diseases.

The state Legislature had approved, and state Gov. Tom Ridge this past year authorized, the spending of up to $5 million to help poultry producers recoup some losses resulting from the voluntary and mandatory destruction of poultry flocks found to test positive for the H7N2 avian influenza; to pay for the costs of bird destruction, facilities disinfection and cleaning; and to pay for research.

In order to comply with the request from the Legislature for information, the state Department of Agriculture, under the oversight of state Deputy Secretary of Agriculture for Administration Zoann Parker, formed five committees, comprised of "stakeholders" and public officials.

Of the five committees, one formed to research legal issues; another focused on the live bird market; another on insurance; one on research; and one on risk reduction.

The general consensus of the symposium was that such a meeting representing the broad scope of avian industry in Pennsylvania was long overdue, and that all components of the industry need to be involved in battling contagious disease.

The role of hobbyists, purebred breeders, and those raising birds specifically to serve the live bird markets in preventing the spread of avian influenza or other disease was highlighted.

Rev. Roland Romig, representing the entire spectrum of "backyarders," told the group about the importance, permanence and growth opportunities in the live bird markets.

Live bird markets are cited as a constant source of the avian influenza, though not a cause.

That disease has turned up commonly in the New York/New Jersey live bird markets, and in some other live bird markets, which has given the markets a negative reputation.

However, according to Romig and others at the symposium, the real problem seems to be a lack of usable testing and health certification, as well as discovering a method for weeding out the few unethical or shoddy operations supplying the markets.

In essence, Romig requested that the rest of the industry recognize the importance of the live bird market to its suppliers as well as the state's rural economy, and to consider the fact that "backyarder" flocks serve as a vast reserve of poultry genetics, as compared to the birds raised and bred by commercial and contract growers.

Of major concern to Romig were the Jan. 2-effective New York regulations imposing new and extensive health certification requirements for shipping live birds to its markets.

However, Pennsylvania's own regulations — or lack of them — were praised for the cooperation fostered between industry and state.

According Dwight-Jared Smith, an attorney working for the state, the state isn't seeking any more regulation of the industry than it has to have, and only a lack of cooperation and trust would create a demand for more intense regulation.

Smith and Schmucker were two of several speakers during the all-day symposium to discuss issues of concern to the entire bird-raising community, Smith explained the new and expanded enforcement authority granted the PDA under the 1996 Domestic Animal Law.

Attorney Smith said that during the previous (to this week) outbreak of avian influenza, he had some role in drafting specific quarantine rules, although the need for legal work in otherwise dealing with the situation was nil, indicating that government/industry cooperation and stakeholder-involved problem solving can result in mutually agreeable results.

Avian Influenza

The second farm is located well south of the northern part of the county where a large area had been under general quarantine for six months.

As was done with a previous incident, the birds are not to be immediately destroyed, but are to be studied while under quarantine.

All of the other flocks testing positive for the non-lethal (causes some death and sickness, but doesn't wipe out a flock as the lethal variety), were destroyed immediately, except for the last one prior to the discovery announced this week.

Earlier this year, it was explained by state officials that delaying the destruction of the birds was done because it was suspected that soon after discovering the disease, the virus may be in a more infectious stage.

It was considered that if the disease is more infectious soon after discovered, then bringing in additional people and vehicles into a farm for depopulation and disinfection may increase the risk of spreading the disease.

According to the PDA, in this most recent spate of outbreaks, there have been 20 flocks to date that have been found to have been infected with the H7N2 avian influenza, affecting two million birds.

Secretary Hayes said that the most recent discoveries were due to intensive testing and cooperative efforts between PDA and the poultry industry.

Hayes also said that some of the $5 million authorized last year by the Legislature and Gov. Tom Ridge as nonreoccurring support for the industry to transition through the avian influenza emergency is still available.

Because it's derived from fungicides found in certain wild mushrooms, new QUADRIS® fungicide has its roots firmly planted in nature. As a result, it carries less risk to workers and the environment than other currently registered fungicides.

Yet QUADRIS is merciless to a broad spectrum of tomato diseases. Its novel mode of action combines preventative and systemic powers to control early blight, late blight, anthracnose, black mold, Septoria leaf spot and other problems. All told, QUADRIS is the strongest and most unique disease prevention ever available.

Co. Down. His research has emphasized improving grazing management to increase intake and utilization of pasture.

At the 1,000-acre institute, grazing research has focused on intensively grazed paddocks made up of ryegrass and grass sward combinations.

Some of the strongest research has suggested, according to the scientist, that animals prefer a certain type of forage — the tetraploids over the diploids. The tetraploids have a higher sugar content and are easier to shear and digest by ruminants, according to Mayne.

Gradually, research emphasis has shifted from variety and maximum yields to "varieties that animals will eat more of," said the northern Ireland scientist.

Other strong evidence suggests that grazing animals prefer the "tall, erect varieties" of forage to the prostrate, or low-growing, plants at the research institute.

Devices to measure how often an animal reaches for forage, tears it off, chews on it, and ruminates, are used in the research. And what the researchers have found, according to Mayne, is that the more the animal can bite off, the more it can handle by its jaws, the more forage it processes, which can translate into improved milking.

Simply put, a "small increase in bite size has a major impact on grass intake," said Mayne. Simply increasing the amount of forage taken in from 0.5 gram to 0.6 gram per bite increases overall intake by 20 percent.

Sward height is also a key factor, Mayne noted. Cows prefer at least 4 inches of grass height. Tall, dense, leafy swards lead to large bites, noted the grazing scientist. In charts, the most intake came from swards measuring about 5-6 inches in height.

That's why, according to Mayne, it is important for graziers to control the grass left after grazing to ensure the height of the sward is suitable for the animals.

Why go about looking into improving forage palatability and investing time in studying forage types? Mayne noted that, three years ago, milk prices in Ireland were, based on U.S. figures, about $18 per hundredweight. Now, the price has dropped to $12 a hundredweight to the producer. And "all predictions see a further reduction to $10 a hundredweight in the next 2-3 years," said Mayne, as European Union support prices continue to wither.

The trend is downward for the beef industry, which went through some major crises with the "mad cow" disease scare. The continuing trend, even for dairy producers, is an increase in size of units and a downward spiral for the amount of producers.

Mayne noted that 20 years ago, there were 20,000 dairy producers in Ireland; that number has fallen to 6,000 today.

Herd size, on average, is about 60 per farm. These "downward" trends are similar for the U.S.

So the idea of using grazing as a way to cut farm costs, including mechanization and labor, holds more appeal for producers.

As a result, the Institute has been tasked with looking at different varieties of the same grass species. Mayne noted that not all ryegrass, for instance, is the same — some have relatively improved dry matter and sugar content than others.

Also, researchers are looking at ways to make the grasses more drought tolerant. And the tetraploid varieties can have up to a 20 percent more nutrients over the diploids, he noted.

In Ireland, as in many places in Europe, producers are under increasingly stringent legislation for nutrient management. The legislature penalizes farmers for not using controls. The idea of using abundant, inexpensive sources for nitrogen for grain crops has been fading. Now, there is more accountability that is written into law. That even includes "unrecovered" nitrogen — the nitrogen simply released into the air.

But along with the movement away from mechanization and the resultant high costs of maintenance and repair, many producers still fail to understand that "grazing is much more difficult to manage," Mayne said. It's harder to maximize management to graze effectively than it has been to simply go out and buy equipment and make the feed.

No matter what the program, eventually stored feeding is important, and producers have to be able to implement a plan that will continue the forage intake. Also, there are some benefits to targeted grain feeding and can act as supplement to the cows when no forage is available.

If storing forage, it is important to ensure that respiratory and proteolytic enzymes are available and that detrimental organisms, including yeasts and molds, are not present in the seal.

One item that surprised the scientists at the Agricultural Research Institute was the supposed length of the grazing season.

While traditionally the animals aren't put out to pasture until April, studies looked at grazing in February on frosted grass.

"The cows went out and were quite happy to eat the material," available to them for about two hours a day from February into March.

It is important for producers, if they want to use grazing on their operations, to determine how it will be implemented.

There is less overall benefits for the cows if, as an instance, 70 percent of the diet is taken in grain feeding/high TMR programs. The forage quality won't bear much of a factor. But if forages will be used almost exclusively, quality bears a huge role in animal productivity.

Overall the acceptance of grazing continues unabated, even in northern Ireland.

"The '90s, I believe, will be the era of grazing," said Mayne. "I am convinced of that."

Other producers spoke of their experiences with grazing at the conference.

One day, dairyman Lewis Stuttle got "sick" of the three-times-a-day milking. "The payback was not there," he said, and some change was needed.

Even though the herd average stood at 23,000 pounds, Stuttle, of Lew-Lin Farm based in central New York State in the Finger Lakes region, a Dairy of Distinction, began grazing about five years ago.

The family includes Lewis' son, Steven; herdsman Gordie Morgan;

Lewis' wife, Linda; and some part-time help.

They have a herd that is 100 percent registered Holstein with 190 cows and 130 head of young stock.

Since switching to grazing, Lew-Lin Farm has gone from 140 to 190 cows using their own replacements. He was satisfied to simply "let the cows harvest the feed," and put in a five-acre pasture. The previous corn fields were seeded to orchardgrass and Ladino clover.

The Graze N.Y. Participating Farm now has 110 acres for the milking herd. In addition to the new seeding, the farm also added 500-800 pounds of high calcium limestone to all the paddocks. He also applies about 50 units to the acre of ammonium nitrate in the spring.

The cows are placed out early — about April 20-25. Some can be placed out even earlier and do quite well, he noted.

Stuttle noted that paddocks are mowed in May and June to prevent the growth from getting ahead of the cows. They are mowed with a 12-foot discbine and winrowed and chopped for haylage. The grass is kept at 8-10 inches maximum height so it is highly palatable and less feed is wasted by trampling. After four years, he noted, the herd milking average is at 21,000 pounds on 50 percent less TMR fed during the grazing season, with less labor.

The high average of milk is 72 pounds.

Stuttle uses a 3/4-inch water line to all the paddocks.

Fences are simple polywire on posts. Paddocks are rotated every 10-14 days in the spring.

A simple corn meal supplement is added to the diet.

In the past, milking used to be from a double-4 milking parlor (eight units). Now, they built a new parlor within the existing one and are up to a double-8 with 16 units milking twice a day, at 2 a.m. and 2 p.m. Taking the cows off the fields on hot, humid days at 2 p.m. helps the cows stay healthy.

Also, providing water lines to troughs in the paddocks is working to improve milk yield. Stuttle noted that the cows "like to drink out of the troughs better than in the barn."

Stuttle also explained some renovations done to the laneways. Where at one time they were muddy and unmanageable, with "six to eight inches of slop," the Stuttles dug the lanes out, put in a textile fabric and gravel, 6 inches of limestone dust, and smoothed them out.

Also, the farm makes use of a mobile grazing unit for the calves, raised in hutches. In the units, the young stock gradually get adjusted to feeding off the land.

The use of grazing has worked well for neighbors. An electric fence was installed and the cows are content to harvest their own feed. Also, the neighbors like it because no more manure slurry is going on the fields.

More information about the conference will be published in the PFGC Foraging Around, a special section of Lancaster Farming to be published April 18.

The key to increasing the milking capability of that harvest machine is to "allow that cow to take a big mouthful of grass," said Dr. Sinclair Mayne, a scientist at the Agricultural Research Institute of Northern Ireland, at the Pennsylvania Grazing and Forage Conference.

Reception Honors Program Winners

ANDY ANDREWS
GRANTVILLE (Dauphin Co.)

Several award-winning forage and grazing supporters were honored for their work in promoting forages and grazing in the state Wednesday evening here at the 1998 Pennsylvania Grazing and Forage Conference at the Holiday Inn.

The Outstanding Pasture Producer Award was presented to Jimmy Garner, Montrose, Susquehanna County.

Garner has been intensively grazing his 70 dairy cows on 35 acres for nearly seven years. He has been actively involved in the Chesapeake Bay Program and the use of grazing to meet the program goals.

"This accomplishment speaks for itself in highlighting Jimmy's grazing management skills," noted Dr. Marvin Hall, extension forage specialist, Penn State. "Mr. Garner is always willing and ready to share his grazing experiences and knowledge with others."

Garner has hosted numerous field days and tours at his farm. These have included visiting farmers from as close as his neighbors to as far away as Russia.

Dick Kauffman, Pennsylvania Forage and Grassland Council, a co-sponsor of the event, presented the award to Garner.

The Conservation Award recipient is Louis A. Kopczyk, Clymer, manager of the Indiana County Conservation District.

Kopczyk has been active in providing opportunities for the residents of Indiana County to learn about uses of forages and grazing management.

"Louis tries to emphasize the role forages can play in proper conservation practices," said Marvin Hall, Penn State extension forage specialist. "Although Louis discusses grazing management with many landowners on a one-to-one basis, these educational opportunities are provided primarily by organizing and conducting field days and pasture management meetings on farms around the county."

These field days and meetings are supplemented with presentations on a variety of related topics presented by farmers, businesses, lending agencies, and government agencies.

Hall noted, "His involvement of many diverse groups and organizations into these on-farm meetings stimulates understanding and better cooperation."

Kopczyk also obtained a grant and produced a fact sheet on various methods of supplying water to grazing livestock. This publication, noted Hall, has been "extremely well received by farmers in both Pennsylvania and

That's the way he'd like to see it continue, he said.

According to Smith, being able to minimize the use of specific regulations in dealing with such disease problems is desired on the part of government and industry.

The 1996-created Domestic Animal Law, created through the efforts of former state Secretary of Agriculture Charles Brosius working with the state Legislature, gave considerable strength to the state Department of Agriculture to protect public health and the health of the state's domestic animals.

The authority to set specific quarantine conditions on a case-by-case basis has been determined to be a far superior method of dealing and reacting to contagious disease outbreaks than attempting to stranglehold the industry through a set of overly restrictive, slow-to-change regulations.

Further, the PDA has the authority over all animals kept in captivity, not just the traditional farm animals.

They should also understand that the virus is microscopic, and can be carried on microscopic materials, mainly organic.

For practical use, they did say that it appears to remain mostly active in manure, and in the birds. Maintaining control of those two physical things by preventing contamination of fields, vehicles, and clothes, and taking precautions to not be careless in any aspect of control, is urged.

Disciplined rodent control and wild bird control is also strongly urged, not only to thwart the introduction of avian influenza, but to prevent any variety of diseases from infecting a flock.

It was recommended that, since waterfowl carry the disease, those raising poultry should not encourage or allow waterfowl near facilities or in farm ponds.

Farm ponds that waterfowl may be able to access should not be used as a water source for poultry.

PDA can require identification of animals, record keeping, the keeping and handling, the safety of domestic animal feed, requirements for interstate and intrastate movement of animals, and to monitor for the presence of transmissible disease.

The department also has the authority to enter and inspect any property or stop any vehicle suspected of carrying animals exposed to infectious disease or contaminated by a hazardous substance.

Smith said this last authority, to enter and search, is one that carries the most concern among citizens. However, he said it is only to be used if there is good reason.

While criminal penalties are not extensive for those who violate the Domestic Animal Law, the civil penalties allowed actually provides the PDA with greater flexibility in solving a problem situation.

It has the discretion to assess and collect a civil penalty of up to $10,000 per violation.

Unlike a criminal violation, there is less burden of proof required to impose a civil penalty. He said those familiar with the criminal and civil trials of O.J. Simpson should be able to discern the difference in burden of proof requirements between criminal and civil cases.

"If reasonable minds can agree, then you don't have to use (the full authorities granted the PDA), but they are good to have," he said.

He said another complaint is that while there doesn't appear to be a shortage of manpower by the state during the initial discovery of a disease outbreak, there are too few field inspectors for day-to-day enforcement.

It can be expected that those who wish to move questionable birds or do something illegally know what time regulatory field crews quit for the day.

It has been recommended, "If you can be everywhere all the time, just be everywhere some of the time," he said.

Schmucker said that the flexibility allowed the department in its authority granted by the Domestic Animal Law is its success.

He said it seems more appropriate to have the role of the department be more to provide education and promoting biosecurity measures than attempting to enforce rigid rules.

The flexibility also allows the ability to adjust strategies in battling any disease. "We're dealing with a moving target," he said.

Further, the state has the strength of two methods for discovery of poultry disease — through mandatory reporting provisions that require producer and veterinarian to report possession of animals that knowingly died of dangerous transmissible disease, or suspected of having it.

Further, through a regular system of surveillance (blood testing and health certification), the state's birds are also monitored for disease.

In other discussions, it was recommended that all poultry producers should keep accurate records and adopt and strictly follow biosecurity measures.

Dairy Compact's Senate Passage Earns Farm Bureau Approval

GLENMONT, N.Y. — New York Farm Bureau is very pleased with the State Senate's recent passage of the dairy compact bill, and thanks the bill's sponsors for understanding and supporting the needs of the state's dairy farmers.

"The dairy compact bill was passed in large part because the Senate sponsors understand the needs of our dairy farmers," New York Farm Bureau President John Lincoln said. "I would especially like to thank Senator Randy Kuhl and Senate Majority Leader Joseph Bruno for their leadership in not only getting this bill to the floor of the State Senate, but getting it passed. They made this happen, and we appreciate it."

In addition to Senator Kuhl, President Lincoln had praise for the bill's cosponsors, including Senators Charles D. Cook, John DeFranciso, Hugh T. Farley, Carl Marcellino, John J. Marchi, Stephen M. Saland, James L. Seward, Dale M. Volker and James M. Wright.

"At the same time, it was heartening to see Senate Democrats support this very important legislation," Lincoln added. He specifically cited Senators Nancy Lorraine Hoffmann, Ada L. Smith and Alton R. Waldon, Jr. for their support of New York agriculture.

"We appreciate the fact that they are working to help the dairy farmers of this state," President Lincoln added. "The dairy farms of this state provide fresh, wholesome milk for the millions of residents of New York State. They need the compact, and these senators rose above the rhetoric and supported this legislation."

Lincoln added that Farm

Bureau has high hopes that the State Assembly also will approve the dairy compact bill so it can be signed into law by Governor George Pataki.

When Roy Crow left home in 1974 to attend University of Maryland, his father dispersed the farm's dairy herd. So when the young farmer from Kennedyville, Md., decided to go back to the farm after graduating, he had to start his herd from scratch.

Not to be deterred, he started by buying 23 of his father's heifers. At the end of 1978, he owned 35 cows, 20 heifers and a Farm Credit Loan.

Feed and facilities at the home farm were first leased for 50 percent of the milk check plus his helping hand with cropping operations. After dairying for four years, he started purchasing used equipment, and in 1987 began renting the entire Kent County farming operation.

Today's operation. Caw-Croft Holsteins is a 450-acre operation with 130 acres of mostly cropland owned and 235 acres leased from his family trust.

With one hired employee and family help, Crow milks 70 cows, averaging close to 23,700 pounds, using a pipeline milking system. Milk is shipped to Land-O-Lakes. Over the years, longevity and pedigrees were bred in via artificial insemination to where he now sells purebred animals domestically and abroad, and is a recognized Holstein breeder.

This farm's equipment costs are low; all equipment is kept well maintained and shedded when not in use. The newest tractor is almost 10 years old.

Average per-acre crop yields on this farm are: 140-bushel corn, 22-ton corn silage, 49-bushel full-season soybeans, 35-bushel doublecrop soybeans, 105-bushel barley and 75-bushel wheat.

Crow does his own planting and haying. But he custom-hires corn, wheat, barley and soybean harvesting, plus corn silage chopping. "What took us two to three weeks is now done in three days," he notes. "Now, we have no dips in milk production due to silage changes from one silo to another."

Relies on expert help. Crow strongly believes in relying on expert help. He readily credits his employee for his cow management skills.

His veterinary and feed company keep him informed of new products and technologies on the dairy side. He works with a local fertilizer company on a nutrient management plan involving testing manure and soils in all fields. "Good relationships with these people are as important to our success as well as theirs," notes Crow.

Land's caretaker. Crow's home farm was tilled by his great-grandfather in the early 1900s. Four generations later, "Now it's my turn," notes Roy. "As a farmer, I'm just a caretaker of what God created. My responsibility is to preserve the land for future generations to enjoy."

Is expansion in the future? "Our choice is to not get bigger. We'll continue to make changes that make the operation easier to run," he says. "But to size-up, that's the next generation's decision."

The personal side. Roy and wife Elizabeth (Sue) devote much of their non-farming time to their three teen-agers, Karl, Robert and Roy (R.J.). "We spend as much time with them as we can, and provide the best education possible," notes Sue. That involvement for Roy has included being a coach and referee for youth basketball teams and hosting school tours of the farm.

Crow has served on two committees urging development of a new comprehensive plan for Kent County. Among many other activities, he's been a delegate of Atlantic Dairy Co-op, a director of Kent County Farm Bureau, and in 1996 was one of four outstanding young farmers honored by the National Junior Chamber of Commerce.

Lancaster Farmland Trust Reports

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — Lancaster County is at a generational crossroads. As hundreds of baby boom-era farm owners now near retirement, many are deciding if they want to — and can afford to — continue farming. The State of Pennsylvania has paved over a land mass equal in size to the entire state of Connecticut since 1950. Today, Lancaster County loses over 1,000 acres of rich farmland each year to development; that figure could rise rapidly in coming years if retirement-aged farmers elect to sell.

Could Lancaster become the next Los Angeles? With the aging trend coinciding with years of depressed milk prices and escalating land/tax values, county extension officer John Schwartz believes that is a possibility. That's why Schwartz serves as president of the Board of Trustees of Lancaster Farmland Trust, a private, non-profit organization that has worked to preserve Lancaster County's productive farmland, thriving agricultural economy, and rich farm-related heritage for the last 10 years.

When naming Lancaster County to its endangered list, WMF officials urged local and national authorities, as well as private citizens, to take action to save the entire "cultural landscape" of Lancaster — not just the county's "pristine farmland," but also its historic urban towns and rural villages.

Lancaster Farmland Trust is — and has been — taking such action, primarily by using a legal tool called a permanent conservation easement. Permanent conservation easements establish legally binding land-use restrictions and ensure that land can never be used for non-agricultural purposes, such as housing developments. Those restrictions affect all future owners of that land and they can never be reversed. Farmers who donate or sell a permanent conservation easement to Lancaster Farmland Trust still own and control every other aspect of their land. They still determine how and what to farm. In fact, Lancaster Farmland Trust structures most easements to suit farmers' personal requirements.

Ten of the 17 owners of farms

Lancaster Farmland Trust preserved last year donated their permanent conservation easements, saying farming was such a critical part of their family's identity that they wanted their farms protected. These farmers recognize that farming is the backbone of Lancaster's economic and cultural heritage. Most also understand that by preserving their farms, they reassure neighboring farmers that a continuing commitment to agriculture makes good economic sense. That reassurance often triggers renewed area-wide commitment to the idea of farming — rather than viewing farmland as an investment to be cashed in to "grow homes" at retirement. Thus, it is becoming increasingly common to see many adjoining farms in some communities preserved.

By donating their easements, most farmers can qualify for significant income tax benefits, and a possible estate tax benefit — benefits that may make it more economical to remain in farming. Lancaster Farmland Trust does pay some farmer for their easements an average of $300 per acre. The difference between that payment and the actual easement value — often over $2,000 per acre — represents the value of the donation for federal tax purposes.

Agronomy Day March 12

HONESDALE (Wayne Co.) — The "1998 Wayne County Agronomy Day" is scheduled Thursday, March 12, from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m., at Marshall Machinery, Inc. located between Indian Orchard and Beach Lake.

Speakers and topics for Agronomy Day include:

- Morning Session (10 a.m. to noon) — Lynn Hoffman, Agronomy Department, Penn State, "Corn Planter Adjustment and Maintenance."
- Dr. Dennis Calvin,

Entomology Department, Penn State, — "Potato Leafhopper - Resist Alfalfa."

- Afternoon session (1 p.m. to 3 p.m.), Lynn Hoffman, "Soil Quality Indicators" and Dr. Dennis Calvin, "Biotechnology - The New Science of Seed."

Other topics to be covered at Agronomy Day include "1998 Wayne County Chemsweep Program" presented by Chris Santore, Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture and "What's New for Agronomic Weed Control?" (a video presentation) from the Penn State University Office of Pesticide Education.

Pesticide update education credits will be offered at this Agronomy Day for those area farmers who need the credits to maintain their pesticide licenses.

Those interested in attending the Wayne County Agronomy Day are asked to call the Wayne County Cooperative Extension at (717)253-5970 ext. 239 with their lunch reservations Few people know the strong agricultural heritage Los Angeles had before development. In 1944, Los Angeles County ranked #1 in the nation in total agricultural production at $129.4 million; Lancaster ranked 15th at $47 million. In 1992, Los Angeles County ranked only 92nd nationally in agricultural production; Lancaster County ranked 13th.

Today, Lancaster County produces $815 million in agricultural products per year. That's more than any other non-irrigated county in the United States — meaning that our production quantity, quality, and costs aren't unduly dependent upon water availability. What's more, most of the County's 380,000 acres of remaining farmland is predominantly Type I or Type II soil — some of the richest, most productive, and scarcest farmland in the world. Lancaster County is also a strategic, low-cost, national food resource since we're located within 500 miles of 35 percent and 60 percent of the respective populations of the United States and Canada.

Agriculture is also important in that it directly employs more than 39,000 people in Lancaster — many of them the very Amish and Mennonite (often called Plain Sect), or other conservative peoples whose traditions have shaped the cultural and economic make-up of Lancaster for nearly three centuries. Lancaster County farmers are generally viewed as the best of the best production-wise because of their unwavering cultural dedication to farming and their extensive use of low-cost family labor.

Although Lancaster Farmland Trust works with farmers of all colors, races, and creeds, it has been especially successful in preserving Plain Sect farms. Plain Sect peoples won't work with the County Agricultural Preserve Board, which also carries out preservation work, because it is a government entity. They will, however, work with the Trust since it operates and obtains funding privately. Lancaster Farmland Trust's outstanding relationship with Plain Sect farmers should prove even more important in coming years since Amish farmers now purchase the majority of all farms that are sold — and kept in farming — in Lancaster County.

Lancaster Farmland Trust is, however, an active partner with other preservation groups. In fact, that partnership recently contributed to Lancaster County's being named to the prestigious World Monuments Fund's (WMF) 1997 "List of 100 Most Endangered Sites." The Taj Mahal in India, Ellis Island in New York, and the ancient ruins of Pompeii in Italy are also on that list of imperiled and irreplaceable treasures that are threatened by war, weather, pollution, development, and other perils. WMF is supported by American Express Company, as well as by contributions from 10 philanthropic foundations.

Pennsylvania Horse Farms Open Doors To Visitors

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — Seventeen professional stables in eastern Pennsylvania will open their doors to the public for two days, Saturday and Sunday, March 28 and 29, during the sixth annual Pennsylvania Horse Farms Open House.

The event, which is free, is a chance for would-be equestrians to visit some of Pennsylvania's most beautiful horse farms, to learn about breeds of horses, styles of riding, and breeding, raising, caring for and training horses, and to explore the many opportunities for becoming involved with horses right in their own backyards. The tour, produced by Pennsylvania Equestrian, is free and self-guided, and individuals travel from stable to stable at their own pace in their own cars. Hours are 10 to 4 on Saturday, noon to 4 on Sunday.

With more than 174,000 horses, Pennsylvania ranks fourth in the US — far ahead of Kentucky — in generation of income from the horse industry. Pennsylvanians spend nearly two-thirds of a billion dollars annually on their horses, and most of that is spent in the southeastern quadrant of the state, where the Open House is centered.

The stables participating in the Open House include breeds, disciplines, and activities that bridged the spectrum of Pennsylvania's horse industry. Nationally-known show stables, breeding farms, a riding club and horse show grounds, a clinic devoted to equine veterinary care, and family-run boarding operations are among the stables welcoming visitors for tours, demonstrations, education and fun. The one thing all have in common is that they offer services to the equestrian public.

Nearly anything that can be done with a horse will be demonstrated during the open house. Reining, dressage, cutting, hunt seat and saddle seat equitation, jumping, western pleasure, showmanship, yoga on horseback, and driving demonstrations are among those scheduled by participating farms. In addition, horse shoeing, braiding, equine massage and chiropractic, nutrition, and foal imprinting will be demonstrated, and tack shops, equine artists and jewelers and other vendors will have displays. A musical quadrille composed of both able-bodied and handicapped riders will perform at one stable, another will have a foxhunting exhibit featuring the hounds, Master of Foxhounds and members of the 128-year-old Kimberton Hunt. At some stables visitors can take a pony ride or carriage ride, at others visitors who reserve in advance can try a short introductory riding lesson. One stable will have games for children, another a petting zoo. The majority of stables will have horses for sale and many will have young foals for visitors to meet.

Breeds of horses represented range from the common — thoroughbred, quarter horse, Paint, Palomino, American Saddlebred, Arabian, and warmblood, to the exotic — Thoroughbreds, a new registry of thoroughbred/Clydesdale crosses used mainly for jumping; Lusitanos, a breed native to Portugal bred for bull-fighting; and Gaited Mountain Horses, sturdy, easy riding mounts native to the Appalachian foothills of North Carolina and Kentucky.

Many stables offer refreshments. Some are provided by the local 4-H or youth group raising money for attending horse shows. One stable has its own coffee shop, another will feature a cappuccino bar.

Six of the stables are in Lancaster County, three each are in Lebanon and Bucks counties, two in Berks County, and one each is in Dauphin, Montgomery, and Perry counties.

Beef Marketing Cooperative Possibilities Outlined

DAVID HIEBEST
Westmoreland Co.
Correspondent

BELLE VERNON (Westmoreland Co.) - Experts from out-of-state, armed with a grant from the USDA met recently with a dozen beef producers to discuss setting up a direct marketing beef cooperative.

The gathering, called by the PA Farmers Union and the PA Association of Sustainable Agriculture brought beef producers from Westmoreland, Fayette, Washington and Greene counties for a day long look at ways to reduce the squeeze put on farmers by the retailers and middlemen. A graph presented early in the meeting confirmed what farmers have felt for the last number of years: The farmers share of the consumers beef dollar has dropped by about $170 per head between 1980 and 1996. At the same time, the market share of the nation's top packers has increased from about 35 to 80% during the same period.

Robert Junk, Jr., Harrisburg, of the PA Farmers introduced the people who would outline some of the possibilities for forming a beef marketing cooperative for the area. Therese Tuttle, a lawyer from Denver, CO would outline the organizational needs. Tom Elliot, a rancher from Montana and New Mexico would discuss some of the ways to provide quality and value added service to the beef and reconnect the producer and consumer. Lana Mullen, a graphic designer from Connecticut would talk about setting up a graphic standard program and the differences and interaction between corporate and visual identity. Shawn Moore, a processing and food specialist from Laramie, Wyoming would talk about the specifics of quality and customer satisfaction.

The session began with Therese Tuttle an organizational specialist and lawyer from the National Farmers Union, Aurora, CO, outlining the scope of the project. The Farmers Union had obtained a $64,000 USDA grant to study co-operative marketing for three counties in southwestern PA including Westmoreland, Fayette and Washington Counties.

The focus of this study would be an attempt to improve farm income. At this point, the attempt is to form a cooperative, give it structure and a vision, and then let it grow on its own. The grant help pay for the expertise to set up the organization, and do test marketing with the people who came into the cooperative.

Tom Elliot, who is part of a ten family ranch on 48,000 acres in Montana and New Mexico, emphasized that a way for everyone to benefit from marketing efforts. That is when farmers and producers generate an added value that is apparent to the consumer. He stressed that when people see value in what they buy a relationship is established which benefits both parties. As an example, he talked about the variety of diversified products come off their land; in addition to specialty crops, they grow wheat barley oats flax, potatoes, silage and alfalfa hay. He has 2500 acres of certified organic production ground, and hosts big game hunters who pay to be guests in the fall. The sustainable forestry project produces the fence posts they need. He noted that the community created in the atmosphere of adding value for the customer releases the creativity of the producer.

John Allen, a beef producer and employee of the Southwest Regional Development Corporation, makes a point during informal interaction. Also in the foreground are Robert C. Junk, Jr., PA Farmers Union, Harrisburg, Don Fretz, Scottsdale, Fayette County Ag Extension agent, and Shawn Moore (back to camera), Laramie, WY.

The bad news according to Elliot, is that current farming practices have not met the needs and wants of the consumer. An "Industry needs" chart from an N-Bar Land & Cattle company study showed that only about 28% of beef produced was on-target for quality.

Shawn Moore, the meat specialist talked about grading qualities in animals and his experience in previous marketing studies. He emphasized getting the right quality to the right market. his research shows that people eat beef for juiciness, tenderness and flavor. He noted that age of the animal is the most telling factor in tenderness: As an animal matures, they develop more connective tissues, which reduces tenderness. The quality of the cut may be reduced when an animal experiences stress as they are raised or right before butchering.

Lana Mullen, a graphic designer from Connecticut, showed examples from her portfolio of ways the image of food can be effected by the way it is presented on paper. A product can have a classy image or an informal flavor through the graphics which created a context for the consumer.

According to Allen Matthews of the B Association of Sustainable Agriculture Community Farm Initiative based in Scenery Hill, "next steps included a tour of possible processors (butchers) the next day. PASA is continuing to contact interested farmers to broaden our involvement. Steering committee will meet in early March to plan a follow up meeting that hopefully will include prospective chef partners as well."

Matthews also reported that a survey is being mailed to nearly 300 restaurants in Western Pa. to obtain their input/interest in the pilot with test marketing to begin this summer."

A steering committee was appointed from the farmers present at the meeting

Maryland."

Dick Kauffman, PFGC president, presented the award to Kopczyk.

The PFGC Special Award was presented to James Hostetter, McVeytown, Mifflin County.

Hostetter, a dairy farmer, "has always emphasized the importance of quality forages to his dairy operation," Hall indicated.

"For many years, Jim has been a strong supporter of the PFGC and its programs," Hall noted.

Hostetter served on the board of directors and as president of the PFGC. He has continued his interest and support of the PFGC since completing his term on the board in 1990.

The Special Award is the highest recognition given by PFGC. It is presented to an individual or company that has made a major contribution directly to the PFGC as well as an "outstanding contribution to Pennsylvania's forage and livestock industry and/or conservation farming," Hall indicated. The recipient's contribution may have been in production agriculture, industry, research, extension, teaching, or other public service.

The award was presented by Dr. John E. Baylor, retired forage specialist, Penn State.

This year's Extension Award recipient is Paul Craig, Dauphin County extension agent.

Craig has been active "in meeting the information and educational needs of producers in Dauphin County as well as the southeast region of Pennsylvania," noted Hall.

Craig has organized and taught at several forage-pasture related schools in the region, including as a major organizer and facilitator of the Pennsylvania grazing conferences.

"Without the help of Paul Craig, the grazing conferences would not be the educational force they have become," said Hall.

"He has always been an advocate of multiplying his educational efforts through the involvement of others who work with producers."

Along with classroom and conference-type educational activities, Craig has also conducted on-farm demonstrations and field days.

Noted Hall, "Paul Craig exemplifies the best an extension agent has to offer."

Grange Responds To Tax Reform Issue

The Pennsylvania State Grange is calling on the General Assembly to implement tax reform that places authority in the hands of local government officials who can act in the best interest of their constituents.

In a letter to the members of the Pennsylvania General Assembly, Legislative Director Brenda Shambaugh said local taxing entities are best equipped to choose the most appropriate tax formula for their individual needs.

"We endorse a large element of local control," Shambaugh said. "A combination of local taxing authorities should hold public hearings for input from which a new tax formula could be developed."

As an advocate for rural Pennsylvania, the Grange is a leading force in agricultural and rural issues. The Grange, with over 31,000 members in 66 counties, is a rural, agricultural and community service organization dedicated to improving the lives of rural Pennsylvanians through legislative action, offering member services and participating in community affairs.

Shambaugh said the reason for backing local tax entities is clear: Pennsylvania is too diverse of a state to expect one formula to meet everyone's needs.

"Different areas of the state have different needs and they should not be hindered by a statewide formula," Shambaugh said. "Additionally, there should be some control on annual tax increases."

The Pennsylvania State Grange has long-standing policy backing the need for local tax reform and led the fight to encourage voters to approve the ballot referendum last November. Members of the General Assembly will now work on writing legislation that lessens the unfair load of taxes on property owners.

The Grange feels farmers, who have many structures for their operations, have been among the hardest hit when comparing who shoulders the greatest percentage of the tax burden.

"Farmers have always paid a disproportionate share of local taxes, and a farmstead amendment will help alleviate that burdensome situation for the agricultural community," Shambaugh said.

The Grange believes a farmstead amendment that includes all farm buildings in the homestead provisions would address this unfair situation.

"Profitability in the agricultural industry is a slim margin — at best," Shambaugh said. "The Grange is firmly convinced that a farmstead amendment would lift some of the financial cloud over our farmers' heads and help keep them producing food and fiber for us all."

The effects of a even more profitable return for farmers in Pennsylvania would have a ripple effect since 25 percent of the state's population is employed in the agricultural industry or an ag-related business.

how can a dairyman afford to raise replacement heifers that would have a sale value of perhaps $1,000, burn her out in two to three years, and sell her at the price quoted above?

At the same time, this push to maximum production contributes to an oversupply of milk and consequently keeps down the bulk price of milk.

I am not a dairyman, but in my perspective, it would make more sense to reduce the cost of production and prolong the useful life of the cow.

One means of doing this is by pasture dairying. Many are proving that it does work when it is done properly, by technology now readily available.

The sad fact is that too many dairy farmers still consider a pasture as that wet meadow down in front of the barn that produces poor quality grasses.

Unless one is willing to give up corn ground to convert to the new (often imported) high producing, top quality pasture grasses and legumes, that farmer will not become a profitable grass dairyman.

Yes, they (grass dairyman) won't be able to brag of the high DHIA herd average, but they can brag of their better herd health, higher reproductive rate, and the fact that they need fewer replacement heifers.

After all, what counts most in any business is not bragging or pride, but the bottom line in cash flow.

This is obtainable, and best of all we'll be helping one another out (fewer unwanted dairy cattle sent for slaughter and driving down beef cattle prices).

As an added bonus, you will burn less diesel fuel, wear out less equipment and save labor while your cows are more contented.

See your county agent today for more information on pasture dairying.

Broiler house management under cold winter conditions offers challenges in environmental control with the competing functions of heating air to an acceptable temperature for the birds while ventilating for desirable air quality, such as acceptable ammonia and humidity levels. Typically, house minimum ventilation requirements are based on removal of the moisture produced by the birds in order to keep house relative humidity in the range of 50 to 70%. Moisture comes from bird respiration and evaporation of manure moisture and drinker spillage.

Elevated aerial ammonia in the broiler house environment is known to be detrimental to bird health and performance. An industry guideline recommends keeping ammonia levels below 25 ppm to avoid adverse affects on bird health and productivity, not to mention worker health risks. Realization of this goal is spurious due to an inability to carefully monitor ammonia levels and lack of guidelines for ventilation rates to control ammonia. Ammonia levels may be determined by feed representatives or the grower through periodic measurements with gas detector tubes (sampler pump $350 with ammonia-specific tube $4 each) or dosimeter tubes ($4 each). Newer, but expensive ($1000 + datalogger), technology will allow continuous monitoring of ammonia levels in the house. Another way to detect ammonia levels is by using your nose. This works, NOT. After a couple years of growing chickens, most growers can no longer detect elevated ammonia.

Increased ventilation rates have been proposed to alleviate the high ammonia concentrations. High ammonia levels have been correlated to high humidity conditions, but on old litter, acceptable humidity levels are often NOT correlated to acceptably low ammonia levels. Other ways to reduce ammonia levels include the use of litter or feed additives which decrease litter pH or lower excreted nitrogen both of which reduce ammonia volatilization. Litter management which reduces wet spots from drinkers and caked litter will improve ammonia control in the house. Old litter can volatilize large amounts of ammonia when used on a subsequent flock so litter replacement between winter flocks is another option.

Research suggests that the unacceptable ammonia level generated from wet, warm, or high pH litter and the practice of placing chicks on reused, built-up litter requires a higher ventilation rate to dilute ammonia levels to acceptable levels for flock productivity. A recent Arkansas broiler house study found that the ventilation rate necessary to control ammonia levels on reused litter the first week of brooding was two to nine times higher than that needed to control humidity. Ventilation rate on day one of bird placement for growouts on old litter averaged nine times the standard minimum ventilation rate. This ventilation rate declined exponentially with bird age so that by two-weeks old, the standard minimum ventilation rate was effective in both ammonia and humidity control. Evaluations from this study included fuel use, provision of new litter for each winter flock, increased heater capacity for elevated ventilation use with increased supplemental heat demand, and over-heating the house to 95°F for two days prior to chick placement to drive off ammonia from old litter. Partial litter replacement in the brooding end only, in partial brood houses, was considered the most cost effective in most circumstances. This is a practice which may be even more cost effective under colder Pennsylvania conditions.

Winter ventilation strategy should provide healthy environmental conditions with economical production of broilers, yet minimization of fuel use often drives management decisions. Birds will substitute costly feed for fuel if conditions are too cool. Inadequate ventilation results in high ammonia levels which leads to respiratory challenges, poorer feed conversion, lower weight gain, disease challenge and carcass condemnations at the processing plant. Pennsylvania has relatively cold winter conditions compared to other major poultry producing regions which makes management of fuel use and ventilation control strategies of more concern. Strategies employed in warmer climates are not necessarily directly applicable to Pennsylvania conditions. An economic analysis of fuel use versus air quality and bird productivity under Pennsylvania conditions is being done with funding from the Pennsylvania Broiler Research Program to provide guidance for better management control of broiler house environment. Data are being collected and evaluations conducted this winter with results and recommendations available in time for next winter's ammonia season.

Land O'Lakes Dairy Products Catches Nation's Top Fishing Sponsorship

GILBERTSVILLE, KY — Land O'Lakes, the Minnesota-based national leader in the production of quality dairy products, has signed on as the newest sponsor of the Wal-Mart FLW Tour, the world's most lucrative competitive bass fishing tournament series.

Land O'Lakes, known for their butter and cheeses, has become the official dairy products of the 1998 Wal-Mart FLW Tour. The professional fishing series, now in its third year, has elevated competitive fishing to the level of awareness of other professional sports with innovative, nationally televised events in which anglers are awarded millions in cash prizes.

Land O'Lakes joins with several of America's top corporations in supporting the lucrative Wal-Mart FLW Tour, that will award $3.65 million during the seven-event series in 1998.

Land O'Lakes will also sponsor the innovative television series called the Wal-Mart FLW Tour during 1998 which will air on ESPN 2.

"Land O'Lakes partnership with the Wal-Mart FLW Tour marks the first time in history that a firm representing the dairy products industry has recognized the potential of the massive fishing market as a viable arena in which to market their products," said Wal-Mart FLW Tour Chairman, Irwin L. Jacobs.

The Wal-Mart FLW Tour has assembled the strongest sponsorship team in the history of sport fishing and believes that, for the first time, the awareness of fishing as an organized sport will be elevated to headline levels, due to the national promotional and cross-marketing opportunities that now exist between the leading companies.

"The Wal-Mart FLW Tour is elevating a sport that has over 50 million participants that spend in excess of $40 billion per year," said Jacobs. "We are developing a clean, wholesome sport, that promotes great family values for our youth."

"Land O'Lakes is proud to be part of the Wal-Mart FLW Tour! We believe the contestants, family and friends of those involved with the Wal-Mart FLW Tour share many of the same values, lifestyles and attitudes of which Land O'Lakes products have come to be known over the years," said Lynn Girouard, Land O'Lakes, Vice President, Consumers Division. "In addition, we are excited about the opportunity to communicate with these consumers as part of our ongoing and comprehensive efforts to develop relationships with people who value high quality products!"

The Wal-Mart FLW Tour, beginning its third year, has taken the leadership position in the sport of competitive fishing by offering cash prizes and worldwide visibility of historical proportions. The 1998 tour will feature fishing history's first $250,000 first place cash prize in the Wal-Mart FLW Tour Championship, presented by CITGO, September 16-19, in Moline, Illinois; the $600,000 Wal-Mart Open, with a $150,000 first place; and four, $400,000 qualifying events, each with a $100,000 first place cash prize.

The highest of the 1998 Wal-Mart FLW Tour is the $1 million Forrest Wood Open—the world's richest fishing event.

Corporate partners joining Land O'Lakes in supporting the world's richest fishing series are: Wal-Mart, Coca-Cola, CITGO Petroleum Products, Chevy Trucks, Uniroyal Fujifilm, EverStart Batteries, Northwest Airlines, Ranger Boats, Mitchell Rods and Reels, Spiderwire, Evinrude Outboard Motors, Evinrude Electric Trolling Motors, Igloo Products, Eagle Electronics, American Camper, and Wheaties.

Farmers Met Congressmen In Washington

CAMP HILL (Cumberland Co.) Farmers from across the state traveled to Washington, D.C. this week to meet with their congressmen and United States senators, to discuss key legislative items affecting agriculture.

About 200 farmers were to have taken part in the annual Washington tour conducted by Pennsylvania Farm Bureau (PFB). The participating farmers were all members of county farm bureau national legislative committees.

Congressmen will be heard how some of the laws and regulations coming out of Washington affects farmers back in their home districts, said Guy Donaldson, president of the statewide farm organization.

PA Farm Bureau represents 25,247 families in 54 county farm bureaus. It is affiliated with the nation's largest general farm organization, the 4.8-million member American Farm Bureau Federation.

PFB farmers recommend legislative action based on policies developed from the grass-roots level of the organization, Donaldson said.

Among top issues Farm Bureau members discussed were:

Approval of fast-track trading authority - This is Farm Bureau's top priority issue for 1998. Pennsylvania exported an estimated $557 million in agricultural products in 1996. If Pennsylvania farmers are to compete successfully for export opportunities, they need free trade and fair access to growing global markets. AG exports have been increasing rapidly in recent years. Fast-track authority, which allows the President to negotiate a trade treaty which Congress must later approve or reject without amendment, would open up new markets for continued export growth by American agriculture. Ninety-six percent of the world's consumers live outside U.S. borders.

Earned Income Tax Credit eligibility - The Earned Income Tax Credit (EITC) is designed to help working people with low incomes. Many dairy farmers depend on it to help make ends meet. But, as the result of recent welfare reform changes, some low-income dairy and livestock farmers are being declared ineligible for the EITC because of income received from capital gains. The problem is, IRS considers the sale of dairy cows or breeding stock at the same as the sale of an investment when calculating capital gains. Farm Bureau supports passage of S. 775 and H.R. 1800 to correct this situation.

Self-Employment tax clarification - In 1996, IRS broadened the Self-Employment tax for farmers in partnership to include cash rental income from farmland. Before that farmers only paid self-employment taxes on income from labor and employment. Farm Bureau is supporting S. 529 and H.R. 1261 to restore the tax to its proper imposition.

Agricultural Guestworker Program - There are over 20,000 migrant and seasonal workers in Pennsylvania during peak harvest seasons for fruits, vegetables, mushrooms and Christmas trees. It's nearly impossible to recruit local workers for temporary hand-harvest work and the Immigration and Naturalization Service continues to reduce the number of illegal aliens. As a result, many farmers are finding it more and more difficult to get adequate numbers of good workers. The current agricultural guestworker program to bring in foreign workers on a temporary basis during labor shortages is not used by farmers because of burdensome requirements. Farm Bureau supports S. 1563 and H.R. 2377 to set up, on a two-year pilot program basis, a new guestworker program capable of responding more quickly to emergency labor shortages.

In addition to these priority issues, the Pennsylvania Farm Bureau members asked members of Congress to:

- Oppose OSHA's proposed ergonomics rules.

- Pass a national highway repair funding bill.

- Reauthorize the agricultural research funding title of the farm bill.

- Reauthorize and reform the Clean Water Act and clarify wetlands regulations.

- Reform the Endangered Species Act to protect property rights.

- Reform the Migrant and Seasonal Agricultural Worker

Protection Act.

- Prevent the loss of key pesticides under the new Food Quality Protection Act.

- Oppose attempts to implement the Global Climate Change Treaty piecemeal through administrative procedure and legislation.

- Make sure EPA's new Air Quality Standards aren't used to penalize farmers.

- Reform taxes by repealing estate taxes, speeding up the 100% health insurance premium tax deduction by the self-employed and lowering capital gains tax rates.

- Make permanent the income-averaging provisions contained in last year's tax cuts.

- Create a special risk management savings account for farmers.

Group Offers Farm/Emergency Training

ALFRED, N.Y. - The board of directors of AGRIMERICA recently made a substantial contribution to FARMEDIC Training, Inc. to continue their work of training emergency providers as well as farm family members and employees to be better prepared to manage farm-related emergencies.

The contribution will be used to attract new FARMEDIC instructors throughout the United States through a scholarship plan developed by FARMEDIC.

The plan is designed to encourage newly trained FARMEDIC instructors to teach fire, rescue, and EMS providers the FARMEDIC agricultural rescue course and farmers, their families, and employees the First-on-the-Scene course.

FARMEDIC was founded in 1981 in New York State to train emergency providers and farm family members to respond to agricultural emergencies. Its unique train-the-trainer method or program delivery has enabled FARMEDIC to receive a national reputation of setting the standard for agricultural emergency training.

Over 800 FARMEDIC instructors have trained over 17,000 emergency providers out of the National Training Center located at Alfred State College.

"This training has made a tremendous impact at saving farmers' lives by teaching fire, rescue, and EMS providers how to be better prepared to respond to and manage a farm emergency," said Dave Hill, executive director of FARMEDIC.

"By understanding the hazards and mechanics involved in a farm-related emergency, rescuers will perform their jobs more efficiently, thus providing better care to the victim," Hill said.

Several years ago, FARMEDIC noted that there was a void in the effort to reduce the numbers of farm deaths and disabling injuries.

That void was the care that was being given by the people who discovered the accident. The First-on-the-Scene program was developed to address this void.

Farmers, their families, and employees are taught what to do and what not to do when they discover an emergency on the farm.

"Life-saving measures often need to be implemented prior to the arrival of trained rescue personnel and the First-on-the-Scene program teaches these measures," Hill said.

AGRIMERICA is a non-profit multi-state association that was founded on the principal of bringing the same advantages and services enjoyed by people in industry to individual agricultural producers.

As a member association, a major mission of AGRIMERICA is to improve the health and safety of the agricultural community through education and benefit plans. The association has been active in various endeavors and organizations in its effort to promote health and safety.

Besides FARMEDIC, others include NYS Agriculture in the Classroom, NYS Rural Health and Safety Council, Empire State Council of Agricultural Organizations, NYS Farm City Council, and endorsements of various insurance plans.

All insurance plans endorsed by AGRIMERICA are fully insured by major insurance companies and are administered by Mutual Health Agency.

Agricultural Innovation Expo Designed To Strengthen Safety Crop

BEL AIR, Md. — New agricultural tools and techniques may be making work easier and more productive for American farmers. But industry safety officials say these innovations must be handled with as much care by farmers today as their ancestors did with the horse and plow.

To help farmers and even weekend gardeners remain productive and safe, a free Harford County Agricultural Innovation and Safety Expo will be held March 28 from 9:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. on the North Harford High School campus in Pylesville.

Manufacturers have been flooding the farming market in recent years with many new products to keep pace with the changing U.S. agricultural industry, according to Harford County Cooperative Extension Service Director Robert Halman. But if proper safety and operational procedures are left behind when these products are taken into the fields, the results can be tragic, he said.

"Although farmers are conscientious, things can be taken for granted," Halman said. "Unfortunately in the production of crops here, there have been some near fatal and fatal accidents."

The list of participants at the expo is growing every day. Along with the extension service, sponsors and demonstrators include Walter G. Coale - New Holland, Deer Creek Equipment - John Deere, Harford County Hazardous Materials Team, Whiteford Volunteer Fire Company Heaps Oil, Harford County Farm Credit, North Harford High School Future Farmers of America and the Harford County Office of Economic Development.

"This is the first time Harford County will see a collection of agriculturally-related government agencies and private businesses coming together for such an event," said Agriculture Economic Development Planner John Sullivan III adding. "Whether you're someone whose family has farmed hundreds of acres for generations or someone who spends evenings and weekends tilling the soil in a home garden, you can benefit from attending this expo."

Exhibits will highlight some of the latest innovations in agricultural tools along with safety precautions which must be taken to prevent potentially fatal accidents. Proper operation of a hay baler, forage blower, sprayer equipment and combine will be demonstrated. Correctly handling livestock and providing animal safety will be covered by the FFA.

Other scheduled exhibits and displays include Safe Handling of Petroleum Products, Roll-Over Protective Structures, Livestock and Horse Trailer Safety, Electric Fence Safety, Farm Fires, Pesticide Spills, Greenhouse Maintenance and Mower Safety. Lunch items will be sold by FFA members.

Also at the expo, persons who have held a Private Pesticide Application license can be recertified through a 30-minute training program provided by the University of Maryland Cooperative Extension Service and the Maryland Department of Agriculture.

Whether it's improving an application technique; watching a new tool demonstration; or practicing new safety procedures around farm equipment and animals, everyone can learn something beneficial at the expo, according to Harford County Government Risk Manager and former Commercial Sprayer John Walter.

"From making sure you still read all of the manufacturer's warnings and instructions on a replacement model for an old farm implement before using it for the first time to buckling your safety belt on a tractor before you start it each time," Walter said, "it's all part of keeping you safe."

For more information, call the Harford County Cooperative Extension Service at (410) 638-3255.

Pennsylvania DHIA

Tenth Annual Meeting

STATE COLLEGE (Centre Co.) — Pennsylvania Dairy Herd Improvement Association (PA DHIA) held its annual meeting on February 19 and 20 at the Nittany Lion Inn in State College, Pennsylvania. Vice President Dale Hoover presided. President Norman Hershey welcomed the group and called the meeting to order.

The attendees enjoyed the first day with an educational program. The audience heard from Rick Smith, CEO of Dairyalea, Inc., Dr. Linda Baker and Jim Boyer DRPC Manager for PA DHIA.

Rick Smith, CEO of Dairyalea, Inc. congratulated PA DHIA on another year ending with a strong financial picture. He explained the history and structure of Dairy One and the workings of Project Eagle. Project Eagle is the bulk-buying project implemented. Mr. Smith explained "the project is working well for the large farms participating." Concluding he discussed the current industry picture. He foresees cooperatives continuing to talk about partnering and sometimes merging.

Dr. Linda Baker took the opportunity to discuss the most recent findings from Milk Urea Nitrogen and True Protein testing and research. She added that the same factors that effect MUN also affect milk protein. After explaining protein metabolism, she concluded with her "take home message" that milk crude protein concentrations are not appropriate to evaluate protein feeding and the proportions of true protein in milk can be used very effectively to evaluate efficiency in diet formulation and nitrogen utilization.

Jim Boyer finished up the afternoon's educational program was. He used the occasion to inform the audience on how to make the Internet work for them. Jim discussed the pros and cons of new technologies on the market and he defined many terms such as ISP (Internet Service Provider). Concluding, Jim demonstrated the use of PA DHIA's web page. Members can access their records through the web page as well access information from other industry sources, to better manage their herds.

President's Report

President Norman Hershey opened the business meeting with his report. Hershey reported "the year recently completed was a very successful one with numerous goals achieved. Prime among them was a loan pay-off which a few short years ago stood at one and one-quarter million dollars. Members' equity improved ... with a bottom line profit of well over $180,000." He warned "we have had two back-to-back very profitable years but we need to remain alert and flexible to stay one step ahead of the competition and meet the changing needs of the farm management business."

He added PA DHIA continues to be a major player in the dairy records business. The fact that 83 percent of the records produced by PA DHIA are usable by USDA for genetic evaluations puts the company in a very enviable position. This is the highest percentage of usable records of any of the Dairy Records Processing Centers in the U.S. With this and other qualities in mind, the decision was made to remain "the full service, independent DHIA in the Eastern United States with our own DRPC."

Ending, he thanked PA DHIA's staff for their hard work in the past year, saying "in order to meet the challenges of tomorrow, we need to remember the lessons of the past and then be willing to take bold steps today to ensure our continuing leadership role in the future."

Awards Banquet

The Awards Banquet was held to honor those with outstanding management performance and outstanding leadership ability in the industry. The award for the 1997 Lowest SCC Herd went to Art and Barb Rutledge. The top 1997 Herd Management Awards were received as follows:

Holstein: Jacob and Sally Tanis of Centre County

Guernsey: Rutter Brothers of York County and Lyle and Laureen Wright of Bradford County

Jersey: William Yoder of Somerset County

Goats: Douglas Newbold of Chester County.

Also honored, was Ed Brake of Franklin County. Ed was awarded the 1997 Clyde S. Robison Leadership Award.

Financial Report

Treasurer Mark Eby reported a very positive financial picture for the past year. Members' equity is up and debt is down. This year concluded two consecutive profitable years. This year's ending profit was $182,670. The association has made a substantial reduction in its debts and a strong improvement on the balance sheet during the year.

Report On National DHIA

National DHIA board member Norman Hershey gave the report concerning National DHIA (NDHIA). He indicated changes will be made in NDHIA. One aspect is the elimination of the NDHIA legal fund and changes are being considered in the way DHIA affiliates will pay dues to the association. Hershey announced that NDHIA CEO Phil Dukas will step down after the NDHIA annual meeting.

Resolutions

The following resolution was introduced by Scott Kriebel and was passed at the annual meeting.

Resolution From District 7

Be it resolved that all herds be listed for publication with DCR (data collection rating) regardless of the number of tests within a calendar year, but only herds with ten tests or more will be eligible for state sponsored awards.

Conclusion of the Meeting

The 10th annual meeting concluded with Jim Boyer demonstrating the new Heifer '98 software package and with George Cudoc explaining the benefits of using Milk Urea Nitrogen.

Team Approach To Problem Solving At Bradford Dairy Day

CAROLYN N. MOYER
Bradford Co. Correspondent
EAST SMITHFIELD (Bradford County) — What does teamwork have to do with running a dairy farm?

Plenty, if you ask Dr. William Heald, professor of dairy and animal science at Penn State.

Heald was the keynote speaker at the annual Bradford County Dairy Day at the SRU Middle School here, Monday, Feb. 16.

In his presentation, "Who does the dairy service industry work for?" Heald outlined a plan to build a team for your dairy farm.

"We are always looking for tools to make us more effective. We are always trying to make our hands more powerful, so we use a tractor. We look for tools to make us think better, so we use a computer. Farm teams get better results than individuals," explained Heald.

Heald defines his team as a collection of skills, abilities, and experiences that can focus on goals.

When building a dairy farm advisory team, farmers should take people that they normally work with and improve the efficiency of that working relationship.

"Think of it as a rocket. The dairy farm owner is the central rocket, but if he has booster rockets around him he can get there faster," said Heald.

Team members should include four to five individuals who have a vested interest in the continuation of the farm, such as the veterinarian, banker, nutritionist, farm workers, or computer technicians.

"Farming is so complex there is no way any one person can know all the best ways to get things done," said Heald. "If you bring people together you will have a better chance of solving problems."

To use the team effectively, choose a coordinator who will listen first, but keep the meeting on track and organized. Also set time limits for the meeting and choose some ground rules such as respect for others, the owner makes the final decision and that confidentiality is a must.

At the first meeting, identify the strengths, weaknesses, opportunities, and threats of the farm. Then set goals for the farm and assign particular jobs to team members.

At subsequent meetings, monitor progress and analyze any changes in the situation.

Heald also notes that the purpose of the team meetings is to accumulate knowledge and not to waste time.

Working as a team instead of going at the day to day work alone may take some getting used to, but it can help make your farm a better and more profitable place.

"It's a learning experience," said Heald. "You can know what others are doing and have a positive attitude."

Heald's comments were heard by many of the estimated 355 visitors to the annual event. Other activities of the day included visits with the 33 exhibitors and the Bradford County Dairy Princess and her court.

In the afternoon, dairy farmers could choose to update pesticide credits including hearing a review of the new herbicides for 1998 and a grower survey of integrated pest management practices.

Also offered in the afternoon was a workshop called "First on the Scene," offered by the Guthrie Rural Health and Safety team. In the program, participants were encouraged to develop an emergency plan and how to respond to agricultural accidents before help arrives.

Because family members are often the first on the scene of a farm accident, having a plan can help that person stay calm in the event of an emergency.

According to Greg Jelliff, there are some key decisions that need to be made such as, should you try to treat the injured person first or call 911 first.

"First," said Jelliff. "Slow down and think. Be safe yourself. You need to look closely at the scene. Sometimes running for help immediately is not the right choice."

He then outlined some situations where by attending to the victim first, you could prevent further injury, especially if estimated response times for emergency help are long.

One example Jelliff gave is in the event of a tractor rollover. If the person is breathing on his own, but there are caustic fluids draining toward him, you could prevent further injury by digging a trench to make the fluids drain away from him.

He also noted that everyone on the farm should know how to turn off all equipment, have access to a fire extinguisher, and know some basic first aid and CPR.

When calling for help, it is important to have clear concise directions to the farm printed and kept near a phone.

"You may think, 'It's my farm, I can give the dispatcher directions,'" noted Jelliff. "But what if the person who found the accident was the artificial inseminator? He might know how to drive to your farm, but he might not know all the road names and be able to give directions to someone else."

The Rural Health and Safety team also offered free hearing tests and body fat analysis to all who were willing to participate.

"Juggling Job and Family" was the topic of yet another afternoon session which was presented by Family Living Educator Cathy Guffey. In her presentation, Guffey shared tips to make life a little less stressful, time management tips, money management tips, and ways to improve communication skills.

She also offered eight characteristics of happy farm families which she adapted from a study conducted by Jane McGonigal and Robert Bruce in New York. First, recognize that all family members' contributions are valuable. Second, shift roles as needed. Third, articulate feelings of uncertainty and share emotions. Fourth, regularly participate in activities and hobbies that take you away from farm business. Fifth, take family vacations that are planned. Sixth, adults do not expect their adult children or children's spouses to live just like the parents. Next, there is experience with employment other than farming and eighth, they know about and use community resources as needed.

Dr. William Heald, professor of dairy and animal science at Penn State, got the crowd drawing triangles in order to demonstrate just how effective using a team approach can be in problem solving.

Guffey noted that there is a wealth of information out there for all families and that anyone interested in obtaining more information should contact their local cooperative extension service.

To include the youth in the day's events, the Bradford County Dairy promotion team got them involved in dairy trivia and other games during the afternoon.

The day concluded with final door prize drawings and hearty thank-yous from Extension Agent Tom Maloney, who chaired this year's event.

"We try to take a family approach to the day. This year we had one of the largest crowds we've seen," said Maloney.

Wiles Receives IPM Award

LIVERPOOL, N.Y. — Visionary Frank Wiles was honored at the NYS Berry Growers Meeting for his achievements in integrated pest management.

Wiles, former county extension director and current executive director of the New York State Berry Growers Association, has a 30-year history of fostering IPM.

Receiving an award by himself won't be easy for Wiles, however, because he wants to share it with NYSBGA. "I'm convinced the award should go to all the berry growers," he said.

Only half a dozen state IPM awards are presented each year to those who show leadership minimizing economic, health, and environmental risks. According to IPM program director James Tette, the purpose of the award is to "honor people for developing new IPM methods or for sharing IPM with others."

Wiles began his tenure with extension as a 4-H agent, developing marketing programs. Gradually he shifted his focus to plant science and "U-Pick" operations. He served as the county director for Cornell Cooperative Extension of Tioga County from 1975-1990. During the early years of the NYS IPM Program, he worked closely with New York's fruit IPM coordinator Joe Kovach, encouraging growers of fruits and vegetables to practice IPM and establishing scouting protocols for strawberry pests in New York. Under his guidance, growers in the southern tier could see IPM firsthand and gain confidence in the methods.

Wiles also has a prominent place in the history of NYSBGA, which began in 1988. According to Wiles, the organization had a good start, then floundered. He says he and the board "worked with it and gave it the attention it needed." Wiles then became the first executive secretary in 1996. "I guess I've been effective in identifying the needs and the resources to the board so things get done," he said. Today, about 160 growers of strawberries, blueberries, and raspberries are members of the association.

Wiles said berry growers are especially close to the consumer and sensitive to their concerns about how crops are grown. He views all NYSBGA members as IPM practitioners and has witnessed a drop in pesticide use in strawberries of 50 percent in New York during the past seven years. Scouting, selection of disease-resistant varieties, and cropping practices have contributed to pesticide savings.

Under the leadership of Wiles, the NYSBGA began defining an IPM berry marketing program. Growers worked with extension faculty Kovach, Marvin Pritts, Greg English-Loeb, and Wayne Wilcox on this process. Wiles describes the labeling effort as "driven by grower groups."

Maryland Jersey Breeders Select Queen, Honor Members

KAREN BUTLER

Maryland Correspondent

WOODSBORO, Md. — A crowd of approximately 115 made this year's 77th annual meeting of the Maryland Jersey Cattle Club the largest meeting so far, according to Fern Hines, club secretary.

The Jersey breeders gathered at the new activities building in Woodsboro to elect officers, present awards, and crown a new Jersey queen.

The meeting this year was held in tribute to Mrs. Charlotte Stiles, a longtime Jersey breeder who passed away last November at the age of 83.

Mrs. Stiles was an active member of the Maryland club, and had not missed an annual meeting of the MJCC in over 50 years. She and her late husband operated Spring Valley Farm in Westminster, Carroll County. A member of the grange for 70 years, Mrs. Stiles was also very active in her church, St. Mary's United Church of Christ in Silver Run, and had been a 4-H leader.

Debbie Osborn, Keymar, was elected president of the association for the upcoming year. Esther Hoffman, Ridgely will serve as vice president, along with P. Thomas Mason representing the Eastern Shore as vice president, and Sharon Osborn representing the Western Shore. Cindy and Fern Hines, Union Bridge, will continue with secretary and treasurer duties.

Four new directors were appointed to the club, Carol DeGroft, Westminster; Christine Hevner, Keymar; Cynthia Keller, Middletown; and Tracey Stiles, Boonsboro. The four are to serve on the board of directors until 2000.

Sarah Bedgar was crowned as this year's Jersey queen. Sarah, a former state dairy princess, is the daughter of Paul and Patricia Bedgar of Freeland.

Marty and Geraldine Stiles, Hidden Valley Farm, were honored with the Dr. Herbert Hoopes Senior Award.

"The award is presented for the outstanding senior member in the Jersey breeders for their accomplishments with the organization. The Stiles have worked so much with the juniors, and they have really contributed a lot," explained Fern Hines. The Stiles farm in Damascus, Montgomery County.

The J. Hanson Hoffman trophy, awarded to the farm with the highest average for energy corrected milk of herds with 10 or more cows, was presented to Tol-Je-So Farm, operated by the Lawrence family of Port Deposit. Their herd averaged 20,268 pounds, energy corrected to 23,920 pounds, with 940 pounds 4.64 percent fat and 711 pounds, 3.51 percent protein.

Other high herd averages for ECM were: 40 or more cows, Queen-Acres Farm - 3X milking 19,412 pounds milk energy corrected to 23,823 with 938 pounds, 4.83 percent of fat and 740 pounds, 3.81 percent protein; 10 to 40 cows, Tol-Je-So Farm; and less than 10 cows, MD-Garden Spot Jerseys with 13,219 pounds milk energy corrected to 18,231 with 781 pounds, 5.91 percent fat and 527 pounds, 3.99 percent protein.

Tol-Je-So Farm received the high herd management ranking from the club for the year. The highest average Total Performance index for herd genetics award went to Janet and Tracey Stiles, Boonsboro.

The junior J. Hanson Hoffman trophy was presented to Sadah Bentz for her high individual senior 2-year-old Piney Lane Lester Dana. Dana's 2-11 record with 297 days in milk was 18,820 milk, 1,020 fat, and 739 protein. Her ECM was 24,684.

The John Stiles Memorial Award, presented each year to the outstanding junior club member, was awarded to Emily Birch, daughter of Michael and Leah Birch, White Hall. Emily is studying ag economics at Purdue University.

The Warren Fender memorial scholarship was presented to Erin the 1969 state Holstein show.

Among the herd's most notable show cows was Zi-We June Ann Governor, VG-88. She traveled with the state herd on rail to the national show in Iowa and was later chosen first-place state four-year-old.

Olympic Gold Medalist wrestler Kurt Angle, featured speaker at the PHA awards breakfast, graciously signed autographs for admirers, including Sarah Weimer.

Active in Holstein roles for many years, Zimmerman chaired the 1965 state convention held in Williamsport, was elected PHA vice president, then moved up to the presidency the following year. He served as a national Holstein delegate for nine years.

A successful dispersal marked a temporary end of the milking herd in 1970. Zimmerman became a substitute, then a full-time, rural mail carrier, a position he held for 21 years while continuing to farm the land. The 4-H animals of their sons John and William were retained from the sale, and other animals later added to begin building another herd.

Zimmerman is a long-time industry and community activist, working with the Scouts, Mifflinburg School Board, Shrine, Union County Conservation Board and Union County West End Fair Association. He was active in helping to found the Pennsylvania Young Farmers Association and served as its president in 1955. He was named Outstanding Young Farmer in 1957, the same year he was awarded an Honorary Keystone Farmer degree.

Glen and Ruth moved from the farm house to their mountain retreat home nearby a new years ago. However, he rises at 4:30 a.m. every morning to make the 20-minute trip to the farm to help John and Will with milking chores. Six grandchildren round out the extended Zimmerman family.

Houser, a Mifflin County native, is the son of Howard and Annie Houser, and grew up near Reedsville, where his father was a sharecropper. When the barn on that farm burned in 1958, the family relocated, purchasing a 287-acre farm in Centre County. Jay also met, and two years later married, Mary Rearick.

Soon after their marriage, Jay and Mary purchased his father's 23 head of registered Holsteins and began their Penn-Dell herd. Over the years they expanded the operation, both cow numbers and facilities, adding a heifer barn, new milking equipment and facilities and 61-tie-stall barn. A recent DHIA test notched the 75-head milking string at an average of 26,369 pounds milk, 1003 fat and 843 protein.

Type quality, along with production, has always been important to the Housers. Their current BAA classification average is 107.8 on 11 Excellents, 24 Very Goods, 27 Good-Plus and 3 Goods.

From their herd, the Housers have bred and developed 142 cows with lifetime production totals over 100,000 pounds of milk, including 30 over 200,000 and a production topper of 310,000 lifetime.

(Turn to Page A42)

Junior Holstein public speaking winner Troy Hartle earned a standing ovation at the PHA's annual convention when he cited examples of some lack of ethics in showing competition. The 13-year-old Bellefonte junior member has his future sights set on becoming a journalist.

PHA Outstanding Young Breeder award winner for 1998 are David and Barb Lentz.

Houser, Zimmerman, Named To Holstein Hall Of Fame

A total of 30 homebreds have scored Excellent, helping to maintain the herd's 20-year BAA between 105 to 107 and earning Penn-Dell the Holstein Progressive Breeder award for a quarter-century. Over 30 Penn-Dell young sires have gone into the AI industry.

An all-time herd favorite was the herd's 5-E homebred, Penn-Dell Elevation Rose-Twin, 5E-92, Gold Medal Dam and Dam of Merit. Though she left the herd in 1995, the four generations then in the milking string carry on her genetic contributions. All four generations are Excellent, and all producing over 1,000 pounds of fat. At 14-2, she broke the state record for her age with a 305-day, 2X lactation of 26,910 milk, 1108 fat and 745 protein. She also has several outstanding sisters in the herd.

For more than 30 years, Houser has been active in Holstein activities and leadership. In addition to heading up the PHA as president from 1996-1998, Houser has been a national Holstein delegate, state vice president and state director from Centre County. He is a 4-H dairy leader of more than 30 years and enjoys showing the family's own cattle along with encouraging young people.

In 1983, Houser was named a Master Farmer and Centre County's Conservation Farmer of the year. He serves on both the county's ASCS and extension boards, along with numerous other industry leader roles.

The Housers have five children and five grandchildren. Their son, Jim, and two daughters, Karen and Barb, all continue to be part of the management team at Penn-Dell. Daughter Mary Ellen and her husband Craig Storm are Wisconsin dairy producers, while daughter Sandra and her husband Steve Haragen operate a Centre County dairy herd.

Offering a toast to the Pennsylvania Holstein Association's annual gathering was Pennsylvania State Dairy Princess Nicole Meabon.

Burdette Elected President

JOYCE BUPP

York Co. Correspondent
GREENSBURG (Westmoreland Co.) — James Burdette, Mercersburg, is the new president of the Pennsylvania Holstein Association, elected to head the state's largest dairy breed organization during its annual meeting, hosted last week in Greensburg by PFA's Southwest District.

Burdette, former vice president of the state Holstein group, assumed the gavel from outgoing president Jay Houser, Spring Mills. The Franklin County dairyman will serve a two-year-term at PHA's helm. Burdette, his wife Nina, and their two sons operate Windy Knoll View farm. Their 76-head milking herd is internationally known for its breeding genetics and showing accomplishments.

"Change will occur, but the challenge will always be to serve the members of the Pennsylvania Holstein Association," promised Burdette in his brief acceptance statement.

Moving up into the vice presidency is former treasurer Dean Johnson, Warren. Richard Allen, Smock, was elected treasurer. Newly-elected to the executive committee are Adam Derr, Dawson, representing the Southwest district, and Steve Vanco, Bear Lake, representing the Northwest district.

In addition to receiving the annual reports, members and guests attending the business meeting had a challenge thrown to them by one of PHA's own junior members. Troy Hartle, 13, public speaking winner at the recent junior PHA convention, shared his award-winning presentation to a standing ovation from the roomful of veteran cattle breeders.

"It's surprising how many times

I have heard, "If you want to be a winner, you have to fix the cow's problem," challenged the Bellefonte-area son of Tom and Lori Hartle.

Hartle related how he had eagerly looked forward to the opportunity to participate in larger cattle shows with his junior animals and learn all he could about showing. At one of his first such events, Hartle noticed a cow being led to the washrack at what he felt was a strange time, only to observe her being led back soon after with a "perfect" udder. He then realized that her udder had probably been injected with a substance to help fill out any hollow or empty looking areas.

Also bothering this junior breeder were the number of adults and experienced show people who suggested that show advantages on his calves could be gained by falsifying birth dates.

"Where is the Ethics Committee at these shows?" he plaintively queried his adult Holstein-breeder audience. "The message being depicted is that, in order to be a winner, you have to lie and cheat." Don't be surprised then, he suggested, if young people lie or cheat, based on what they have seen and heard adults doing in similar circumstances.

"Not everyone cheats," Hartle adamantly stated. "I don't cheat; and I am a winner. In life, there are no gray areas, only black and white."

Members passed several resolutions addressing issues facing the dairy industry, including one supporting the introduction and passage of Dairy Compact legislation in Pennsylvania. One resolution was aimed at the Pennsylvania Farm Show Commission, requesting efforts be made to dress-up the appearance of the show area during the dairy judging events.

Offering a historical perspective to the 1998 PHA convention were a trio who also attended the first, held in Greensburg in 1955, were, from left, Paul Countryman, Art Nesbitt, and Bill Conyngham.

ing the dairy judging events. PHA members also supported a resolution to request the national Holstein Association to provide one free pedigree with each animal registered.

On the industry political side, resolutions were passed supporting former state Secretary of Agriculture Boyd Wolff to the Penn State Board of Trustees and support Mansfield-area breeder Ron Wood to re-election on the national Holstein Board.

Featured annual meeting speaker was Doug Blair, president and chief executive officer of Alta Genetics. The British Columbia native is an avid Holstein genetics historian and has traced the lineage of dozens of the breed's top animals back to their European cattle ancestry.

Blair noted during his informative presentation that the whole Holstein breed was originally built from "grade" animals. He told the Pennsylvania breeders that only a few farms have ever had more than one sire appear in the "Top 10" listing since 1979; and, of the top 142 sires inclusive in that listing, 122 of them came from 122 different farms.

"The good ones are rarely from famous herds," Blair concluded.

Sheep Provide Weave For Bow Family Fabric

VERNON ACHENBACH JR.
Lancaster Farming Staff
ANNVILLE (Lebanon Co.) — At the edge of an old apple orchard in the sheep pasture behind the Annvile farmhouse that Ben and Mary Bow call home is a rotting, old wooden wagon.

For years, friends and visitors who have traveled back the long, winding dirt lane to the farm have commented on the wagon and its wooden-spoke-and-iron wheels.

Most said that Ben and Mary's wagon was probably worth some money, especially when the wheels became faddish lawn decorations.

But Ben said the wagon doesn't move.

Years ago, when the couple were trying to make a go of making the farm pay for itself, they raised tobacco next to the orchard.

The wagon was used to haul the harvested tobacco lathe. And, after back-breaking harvesting and loading the wagon, they started pulling the wagon down through the orchard to get to the lane to take the tobacco to the barn.

The weighed-down wagon slid sideways on the grassy knoll of an orchard and into an old tree.

Using an ax and saw, Ben, already tired and sore from the tobacco harvest, then spent several hours cutting down the tree.

After freeing the wagon, they had a brief victory celebration, and started forward with the harvest.

The wagon traveled several more feet and then the axle broke.

That was the last straw. God must have meant for the wagon to stay in the orchard.

That's where it stays.

No use messing around trying to change things that can't be changed.

But for those things that lend themselves to change, the Bows are ready to get involved.

Such as sheep.

Last year the Bow family received a prestigious national traveling award from the American Corriedale Association, a sheep breed registry and promotion organization with an estimated 1,000 members.

The Bows were named the 1997-98 outstanding Corriedale breeders of the United States.

Corriedale sheep are a dual-purpose, high grade wool breed developed about 1866 by James Little of the Corriedale Estate in North Otago, New Zealand.

The award itself is a large, fancy silver serving tray, the "Guthrie Trophy" donated by Senator J.F. Guthrie, of Victoria, Australia, where the Corriedale breed is historically recorded as being developed almost simultaneously.

Guthrie was a noted Corriedale breeder who made the donation with the understanding that it be awarded annually to the most outstanding Corriedale breeder in the United States.

The award was first presented by the ACA in 1951 to J.F. Walker of Gambier, Ohio.

According to ACA spokesperson Marcia Craig, of Clay City, Ill., the award is based on the number of flocks started, advertising, service to the association and breed, and the improvement accomplished for the breed.

The Guthrie Trophy recognizes the progress and outstanding success the Bows have had in breeding top quality Corriedale sheep.

Craig said that while she didn't know the Bows personally, she knew of them and said they have a reputation of being strong promoters of the breed.

On the back of the serving tray are the names of the 45 previous awardees, and most winners are from the traditional big sheep country in the Middle West and West — Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Iowa, Texas, Missouri, Nebraska, Colorado, Montana, Michigan, California, Washington — but there has been a Maryland winner (related to an Ohio winner) and a previous Pennsylvania winner. In 1994, Rupperts Corriedales, of Fairfield, Pennsylvania were the recipients.

Some of the names are professionally engraved. Others appear to have been scratched in by hand.

The tray carries some wear, from being held and admired by the different people who have received it.

"It's an honor to be chosen by your peers as being the outstanding breeder of the year," Ben said. "That means quite a bit. That is recognition by the industry for doing a good job, and you can't be anything but proud of your family," he said.

Ben said that the award wasn't presented to any one member of the Bow family, because raising and breeding Corriedale sheep has been a family effort.

"When you say farming, it's not a one-man job," he said, adding that the recognition the family received came from years of effort by his family. "It's not something that comes in one year. It takes everybody and a lot of years to accomplish something like that," he said.

The Bow family includes their three children — a son Benjamin Jr., or "Benj," who lives at the farm and works in Lancaster in an agriculturally related job; and two grown daughters, Melanie Horchler of Volant who has a flock of 40 Suffolk ewes, and Julie Willard of Lawn who raises Hampshires and has two children involved in showing them.

All three of the Bow children have been involved with 4-H sheep projects, and showed in competitions at the county level and Farm Show. They still are involved. Melanie worked for three years with the university flock at Penn State, before getting married and moving with her husband to a small farm where they raise their sheep.

The family has traveled to various shows in the Northeast and to some in the Mid West, working side by side at the farm to prepare for the shows.

Over the years, breeding, raising and showing sheep became a core family activity, Ben said.

But the family didn't start out with the idea of sheep becoming so central to their lives.

The family farm is called Locust Ridge, accurately enough because of the locust trees that provide a thin forest along a ridge that backs the small secluded valley in which the farm sits.

The farm is 65-acres of freedom from the sights and sounds of the nearby and surrounding urban sprawl that is currently threatening to pressure local resources beyond limits.

The way the family got into sheep was because of the nature of the farm and how it came to become acquired by the Bows.

The farm has 200 yards of the Quittapahelia Creek running through it, and Ben said he used to avidly hunt ducks along it. A bend in the creek he now owns was one of his favorite spots.

He said he used to take a break from hunting and look around the unoccupied and overgrown farmstead.

Eventually he said he got to know the place well and, with no one around, sat on the porch of the house and looked out and said to himself that it was a very beautiful place and would make a good place to live.

After they purchased the farm in 1967, some friends visited to see the property that Ben and Mary bought.

One of their friends had an unwanted Dorset ram. "It was butting people and they wanted to get rid of it and we had all this empty ground," Ben explained.

So they got a ram.

The farmstead was overgrown with raspberries, poison ivy and honeysuckle, and the Dorset ram enjoyed the weeds, Ben said. He said that sheep are good at cleaning up those weeds.

"So we had one sheep, and we decided maybe we should get some more," Ben said. "We got a couple of sheep to beat back the brush so we could see what we had (in buildings and landscape on the farm) and it seemed we had so much poison ivy and my wife is allergic to poison ivy, and we got a couple more (sheep)."

He said that the one barn was so covered with poison ivy that it looked like some of the older houses that have purposeful walls of English Ivy.

"As the children got close to 4-H age, we started to upgrade the flock to help them, and then it begins to get competitive, and then it becomes like a disease, and then 30 years later, you get dialed in on this thing," Ben said, laughing.

They currently have 80 mature Corriedale ewes, not counting yearlings and lambs. As of this week they had 136 lambs on the ground and were waiting for a few more to come to finish out their spring lambing season.

They also have 48 Suffolk, though Ben said that they have Suffolk thanks to Melanie.

"There is not a lot of poison ivy here now," Bow said.

They started with Dorsets, but Ben said that in his mind, and given the self-reliance upon which the family has depended, he wanted a dual-purpose breed and the Corriedale fit the ticket.

"Corriedale wool is clothing wool," he said. "It is nice, it's soft. I like wool, and I also think they're pretty when you see them in the field."

"I look at them every day and you got to like what you're looking at," he said.

As far as table fare, Ben said, "We've eaten Corriedale and Suffolk, but can't tell the difference."

Bow is a school teacher at Lebanon High School.

In fact, he has been involved in a number of different activities — he is a high school industrial arts teacher, just retired from the Pennsylvania National Guard that was involved in the Gulf War, he has been involved with the Lebanon Area Fair for 25 years, 15 years in leadership.

"I've got a lot of irons in the fire," Ben said.

The irons are being pulled out now, he said. With 33 years teaching, now retiring from the Guard, and the children grown, he said it's time that he and Mary start working on some things for themselves.

"Our goal right now is just to remain constant and fine tune this so that our genetics are predictable," he said. "Overall we have a good flock. The top 50 percent is pretty good, but I would like to refine it so that whatever animal is sold out of the flock is top quality. I want to be one of the top breeders in the nation."

He still has his work cut out for him, he said.

"It's finally paying off," Bow said about the years of studying sheep judges' decisions, observing stock of other breeders, selecting from his own flock, and making careful decisions in purchasing breeding stock.

One of his keys to recent success has been a ram that he has been using to breed a number of his ewes.

The large male has a long, well-shaped body, neck and head, and has fathered several show-winning offspring.

According to Ben, breeding for quality requires a certain intensity of focus in order to maintain consistent results.

The practice of raising and breeding lines of any type of animal can be daunting, considering the variability of genetics and the surprises of recessive traits.

However, after spending some time with a species, breeding generations of animals, participating in shows, listening to judges give reasons for placing animals from best to worst, repeatedly scrutinizing winners and making mental notes, and reading, patterns can become apparent, and insights can be gained.

Being able to see through the grooming techniques designed to hide flaws or enhance positive attributes also helps in understanding the realities of breeding sheep.

"We've been at it for some time," Ben said recently. "We still have a way to go, but we're starting to get some attention."

The quality of the fleece must be considered along with the meat-yielding quality of the frame. The genetic qualities must still demonstrate the ideal breed qualities.

But there is the roadwork, the preparation, the dedication, the decisions, the headaches.

They show Corriedales at five to six shows a year, mostly in the Northeast, but also in Ohio, Illinois, and Missouri.

Ben said that his flock has been getting attention because of the shows, and the winning by other people who purchased animals from the Bow flock.

The grand champion fleece of the Ohio State Fair came from a Locust Ridge ewe purchased by an Ohio breeder. Bow said that is important because Ohio is a stronghold for Corriedale breeders, and it means something when winners start coming from out-of-state.

"Over the years, if you're constantly showing, and not number one, but in the top placings, then you can get noticed," Ben said explaining his understanding of the recognition his family received.

They also received recognition when a ram out of a ewe they donated to the Ohio State University turned out to be the best ram lamb there, and the university used the Locust Ridge-developed ram as a sire to develop its flock.

"Things like that made our family name keep coming up," Ben said, "just like, we have been the champion breeder at Maryland, and at the Pennsylvania Farm Show for the last couple of years."

The Bows have also donated the use of their lambs for use in Christian pageantry at nearby Lebanon Valley College, and also at the Cornwall Elementary School.

The Lancaster County tourist entertainment attraction Sight-and-Sound used to rent lambs from Bow, but actually purchased some and now maintain their own flock because of the specific needs they have for certain size animals.

The Bow name has also been associated with sheep through the county 4-H program and the county fair.

"I have always felt that we, the Bow family, owe something to the 4-H program for what it has done for us. It has made a good impression on our lives and on our children," Ben said.

He has donated his time to instruct youth on shearing and sheep activities and wool, etc., at various events, over the years.

However, he said the key to recognition by the national organization is developing a flock for good shape and consistency.

The strategy for developing his flock has been based on advise of keeping the top 10 percent of the flock for breeding.

"You have to have at least 25 sheep. Your predictability is going to be pretty poor if you don't," he said.

It's better to have a 100 from which to select, he said. That gives 10 animals from which to focus the future of the flock.

After a number of generations and selections, and as more and more of the flock is refined, quality of the cull animals becomes higher.

If the Bows' flock contains 50 percent show quality animals, they can sell 40 percent to others for showing or breeding, and continue to keep their 10 percent for continue the program, and also sell or use the other 50 percent.

The Corriedale breed was derived from an 1866 cross between Long Wool rams and Merino ewes, for the purpose of developing an animal that would do well on the New Zealand range in producing a good carcass and good wool.

Bow said the wool of the Corriedales is naturally finer than most, and making breeding decisions for dual purposes is easier somewhat because of it.

Line breeding is part of the game for creating consistent animals, but introducing outside genetics is very important too, in order to repress the recessive and usually unwanted genes.

He tries to keep his breeding ewes about 75 percent pure and is working on developing a 50-50 ram to use on them, "... so we won't stray too far from what we consider ideal, and at the same time keeping down recessive traits.

"You're always going to have recessive traits that you're not too proud of, and cull them out. We have it pretty well under control now.

"But farming is a science with cause and effect, and the farmer is the manipulator, especially with animal husbandry," Bow said.

"You go out and find an animal you like, and bring home a ram to use, and think how the lambs should come out, and they don't.

"It's the same with how much fertilizer to use, and how much to feed the animals, and the cost-effectiveness of feeding. You can't have them too fat, because fat reduces fertility, and all of these things wind together and that's what makes it interesting to me," Ben said.

"And each year, breeding season brings excitement about what will result in five months down the road, and what will work, and then it teases you and keeps you coming back."

Part of the Bow family Corriedale flock feeds behind Ben, Mary and Benj Bow, who are joined by dogs Rip and Jake at the edge of an old orchard, now a pasture behind their Annville farm house.

Consuming Thoughts

Penn State Extension Home Economist For Berks Co.

Winter days are great for tackling do-it-yourself projects around the house. Even though the weather has been mild, it's still too early to start working in the yard or garden, so devoting energy and enthusiasm to "getting things done" in the house has almost no competition.

The kitchen is probably a good place to start with some remodeling or refurbishing projects. After all, it gets heavier use, almost every day of the year, than any other room.

- Before tackling any project, no matter how simple, do your homework! Read home decorating magazines for ideas. Explore kitchens in model homes. Investigate gourmet shops and kitchen accessory stores in your area.

- Personalize your kitchen by choosing a "theme" that fits your lifestyle. For instance, create a country kitchen atmosphere by covering a bare wall with simulated brick. Hang cooking pots and utensils out in the open on wrought iron rods. Add wicker baskets, gingham curtains, and let your imagination go!

Use herbs and baskets as your theme with an herb border wallpaper and baskets for useable food serving or storing accessories.

- Get twice as much use from the space you've got. For example, create a family snack bar and memo center in one. Install a counter along one wall. Add a couple of stools underneath it, a bulletin board and calendar above it, and you've got yourself an information and planning headquarters the whole family will enjoy.

- Follow common-sense safety precautions. Choose the right tool for the job and keep it well maintained. Make sure you have enough light, and wear work clothes suitable for the job. Keep tools, paint cleaners, etc., out of children's reach. Allow yourself plenty of time – most accidents happen because people are rushing to finish the task.

- Become familiar with the surface materials in your kitchen and how to maintain them. Use household cleaners that will protect their beauty and service.

- An easy all-purpose cleaner can be made right in your kitchen. Here are three recipes from which to choose:

1. By combining 1 teaspoon borax with one quart of warm water. Add a splash of lemon juice or vinegar to cut grease.

2. Mix 2 teaspoons borax and 1 teaspoon soap in one quart of water. This mix can be stored in a spray bottle.

3. Mix 3 tablespoons of washing soda per quart of warm water.

- Remember that powdered cleansers are the most abrasive and will scratch most surfaces with regular use. Always use a gentle, liquid product on fiberglass, marble, glass, and Formica surfaces. Apply the least amount of cleaner possible with a damp sponge and light touch on chrome appliances, stainless steel, and refrigerator doors.

- Also use make-it-yourself polishes. Clean copper with salt and lemon juice or vinegar. Make your own brass polish by combining two tablespoons of salt, a cup of vinegar, and enough flour to form a paste.

Pa. Jersey Queen Candidates Sought

LIBERTY (Fayette Co.) – It's almost spring; a time for watching that first brave flower poke its head through the cold earth and for looking forward to the long sunny days ahead. It's also the time that Pennsylvania Jersey breeders select a new Jersey Queen.

Not only will the new queen represent Pennsylvania at various fairs, sales, and activities, she will also be Pennsylvania's official representative in the National Jersey Jug Queen contest to be held in Louisville, Kentucky in November.

All young women between the ages of 15 and 19 who are daughters of Jersey breeders or who own one or more Jersey projects are eligible to compete.

The Pennsylvania queen will be selected by a panel of judges at the Pennsylvania Jersey Association Annual meeting to be hosted by the Cumberland Valley Jersey Breeders.

To enter the contest, contact youth director Melanie Dietrich Cochran for an application. Call her at (717)423-6828 or send her an e-mail at sdietric@epix.net, or write to her. Send completed applications plus two photos of yourself to Melanie at 92 Leshar Road, Newburg, PA 17240 by March 15.

New John Deere Rotary MoCo's

Cut cleaner. Cut quieter. Cut quicker.

Four new John Deere Rotary MoCo's join our current 945 Rotary model for fast haymaking. They're great for making quick work of thick grassland or harvesting tangled alfalfa.

Take your choice of five cutting widths, from the nimble new 8-foot 2-inch 915 to the whopping 14-foot 6-inch mid-pivot 955 – the widest rotary ever from John Deere and perfect for large acreage.

All five use a new disk rotation system that improves cutting and reduces streaking. All disks rotate toward the center of the platform; there are no areas where disks rotate away from each other, so streaking is minimized.

To further ease the stress of making hay, these new MoCo's run quieter. New cutterbar modules use a new gear design to keep decibels down. High-contact-ratio gears feature more teeth for more positive contact – less noise.

Of course quiet, clean cutting is just the start of good haymaking in Pennsylvania. That's why Optional Endwise Transport Trailer helps you negotiate narrow gates or bridges by slimming a 955 or 945 MoCo to under 10 feet for transport. No tools are required, loading/unloading takes less than 2 minutes.

these new rotaries offer a John Deere exclusive for faster drydown – impeller conditioning. Its unique rubbing action removes the waxy layer from stems so moisture evaporates faster, hay dries quicker, and you bale sooner. Or choose another John Deere exclusive – urethane-roll conditioning. The cold-formed urethane rolls stay arrow-straight for uniform conditioning, fast drydown, and increased durability.

Stop by and see why nobody does hay better. Just ask your John Deere dealer to demo a new rotary MoCo.

MAKE NUTRITION COME ALIVE

Welcome to National Nutrition Month!

March is the month set aside by American Dietetics Association to recognize the important role that nutrition plays in maintaining good health.

National Nutrition month is also a time to focus on individual nutritional needs. Calorie, protein, vitamin and mineral requirements vary from person to person depending upon several factors: gender, age, health status, and lifestyle, including the amount of physical activity one has. A meal plan can be geared for these needs and to include an individual's food preferences whether they are from their ethnic background or general likes and dislikes.

There are several guidelines that serve to provide a framework for daily food choices.

Nutritional recommendations can be found in the Food Guide Pyramid, the diabetic exchange system, and the Dietary Guidelines. These are "tools" for the individual to assess where their diet plans currently stand and then provide a "blueprint" to building a healthy meal pattern.

To start this individual assessment, one must keep accurate food records for at least three days. Keep note of portion size, such as 1/2 cup of orange juice, 8 ounces of milk, or 3 ounces of hamburger. Also note the way the food was prepared, such as 8 ounces of skim milk, 3 ounces of broiled hamburger, or 4 ounces of fried chicken. You may be good at guessing size, but a food scale, measuring cups and spoons are more accurate for this assessment.

Then take a look at either the Food Guide Pyramid, the diabetic exchanges, or the Dietary Guidelines. Choose only one "tool" to use because using more than one can become confusing. Compare each of your three-day food record with this tool. Note where you were right on target, then where you fell short. Perhaps you didn't meet the recommendations of 5 fruits or vegetables per day or maybe you were low in milk consumption.

Next, you make a plan for improving your choices. To make this process easier, select only three goals that you feel are realistic and can be accomplished over the next seven days. For example, you can write your goals as:

1. "I will eat three pieces of fruit each day."
2. "I will decrease my intake of butter or margarine by two teaspoons."
3. "I will increase my consumption of milk to 16 ounces per day."

Once you have accomplished these goals and they become part of your eating habits, then move on to a set of three other goals. This way, you have individualized our plan for better nutrition.

Some people may have health problems that make this assessment and planning more difficult. They may have diabetes, stomach or bowel irritations, heart disease, lactose intolerance, or food allergies that require special dietary adaptations. People who have these conditions must learn about food substitutions, foods to avoid, or those which must be increased to prevent a vitamin or mineral deficiency.

A registered dietitian can help plan meals for these special health considerations. He or she will alter the plans according to the individual's needs and offer suggestions for food shopping and preparation.

To find a registered dietitian, call your county extension office, local hospital, or dietetic association. To obtain information on the Food Guide Pyramid or Dietary Guidelines, contact your local county extension office.

Lancaster Society 18

Lancaster Farm Women Society 18 held its February meeting on Feb. 21 at the home of Lettie Nissley as hostess in her Willow Valley apartment filled with lovely antiques. President Martha Stoner called the meeting to order. Devotions were presented by Mac Weaver, a scripture portion followed by a poem. Roll call was answered by telling of winter projects, interests, and accomplishments. 17 members were present.

Members filled shoe boxes with gifts for needy children at Christmas to raise the number to 1,500,000 for the Boone family to give out as one of their 170,000 projects in Mexico alone. Other projects include Gospel Crusade, medical help, a home for very sick children, and disaster relief. After refreshments a business meeting was conducted and ladies gave a report on the convention at the January Farm Show.

A real Valentine touch was added when a member admitted her beautiful red dress was a surprise Valentine gift from her husband. Lettie carried a basket of jellies and candies to each one to choose a gift to take home. The March meeting will be a breakfast with husband and guests at Kountry Kitchen Restaurant.

Packed With Nutrition

When people hear the words "nutritious recipes," it triggers different ideas. Almost every kind of food has some redeeming factor even if it's considered junk food. But generally foods that are nutrient dense are nutritious—although they may be high calorie.

Today's recipes include a variety of foods that are high in calcium, protein, potassium, or a variety of vitamins and minerals. Some foods high in these nutrients may need to be avoided or adjusted to meet special diet requirements.

PASTA WITH VEGETABLES AND CHEESE

2 cups medium elbow macaroni, uncooked
1 medium onion, chopped
1 clove garlic, grated
2 medium carrots, peeled, sliced thin

1 1/4 cups broccoli florets
1 1/4 cups cauliflower

2 cups zucchini, cubed

Sauce:

1 tablespoon all-purpose flour
1/2 teaspoon dry mustard
1/4 teaspoon white pepper
1/2 teaspoon salt
1 1/2 cups low-fat milk
1 1/2 cups low-fat sharp cheddar cheese, shredded

1/2 cup non-fat ricotta cheese
In a large pot of boiling water, cook macaroni, onion, and garlic for 4 to 5 minutes. Add the remaining vegetables and cook for 3 to 4 minutes or until macaroni is tender. Drain well and return to pot.

In a 2- or 3-quart saucepan, mix together flour, mustard, pepper, and salt. Whisk in milk until flour is thoroughly mixed. Heat over medium heat, whisking for 4 minutes or until mixture thickens. Gradually whisk in shredded cheese until completely melted. Stir in ricotta and stir until incorporated.

Add cheese sauce to macaroni mixture. Return to heat, stirring frequently about 5 minutes. Makes 6 servings. 280 calories/serving.

Eggs are one of nature's most nutritious creations. Eggs are protein-rich, low in sodium, contain vitamins and minerals. In addition, most egg dishes are fast to fix and inexpensive compared to other protein foods.

When the gang is gathered for breakfast or you're planning a brunch, eggs baked in individual rolls are a pretty, and simple-to-make choice. Serve with fresh fruit—sliced or chopped into a compote.

BAKED EGGS IN BREAD BOWLS

6 Kaiser or round rolls, uncut

3 tablespoons Dijon mustard

3 tablespoons reduced-fat mayonnaise

2 cups shredded carrots

6 eggs

6 tablespoons shredded low-moisture, part-skim mozzarella cheese

Fresh dill sprigs, optional

Slice tops off rolls about 1/4 -inch from top. With fork, scrape out insides of bottoms of rolls, leaving about 1/2 -inch wall all around. Save crumbs for another use. Set rolls aside.

In medium bowl, stir together mustard and mayonnaise until well blended. Stir in carrots until evenly coated with mustard mixture. Spoon one-third of the carrot mixture over bottom and up sides of each roll to form a nest. Place rolls and tops, cut side up, on baking sheet. Break and slip an egg into each carrot nest. Sprinkle 1 tablespoon cheese over each egg. Bake in preheated 325 degree oven until whites are completely set and yolks begin to thicken but are not hard, about 30 to 35 minutes. Garnish with dill sprigs, if desired.

On Being a Farm Wife (and other hazards)

Joyce Bupp

Bad news bombards us every day.

The first five minutes of nearly every local and national television newscast covers a rash of horrendous crimes and embarrassing scandals. Radio, the same. Likewise, too often our newspapers. The stuff once common to only distant places. Now, commonplace right in our own back yards.

Where are our heroes? Our role models?

Within a few-day span last week, several heroes brushed my life. And reminded me of how many heroes - spoken and unspoken - we interact with all the time. Probably often not even realizing it.

One was an obvious one, an Olympic gold medalist who spoke to an industry meeting we attended. A young man who lost his father when he was just a teenager, he went on to win Olympic gold in the summer games hosted in Atlanta a few years ago.

After a replay of a video for the audience of a tearful medal awards ceremony and our American flag being raised, there were few dry eyes in a roomful of dairy producers. Men and women. Surely, this is a hero and role model for us all, and especially for our young people.

A second role model had addressed the same group less than a day earlier. This teen cattle breeder presented an award-winning speech focusing on "doctoring" cows in order to win in show competition. On how he had eagerly looked forward to participating in a large cattle show with some of the "big," well-known breeders and exhibitors. And on the eye-opening experience of realizing that a few of those exhibitors (and I believe it is only a few) use highly-questionable practices to

He challenged a roomful of adult leaders to pursue steps to correct such cheating.

That is a hero. That is a role model. Often, others among our heroes and role models don't get any public recognition.

Within yet a few days more, we attended another event featuring a quiet hero. A dairy producer and long-time friend. Honored by children upon retirement from milking cows. After having kept her farm and herd together through the deaths of two husbands over several decades and battling with one through to the end of an extended bout with cancer.

No gold medals nor awards ceremony. Not even a speaking opportunity. But, surely a role model for others for her determination, endurance and hard work, day after day.

Not really any different than training to be an award-winning athlete - showing up, day after day, and working hard.

How often do we hear or read about ordinary heroes? The ugly stuff is what too often commands the headlines.

And isn't - sadly - likely to change, given human nature.

Good news bombards us every day. But it's too often overwhelmed by the obnoxious, shock stuff.

Dairy Farmers Launch Largest-Ever Cheese Promo

PITTSBURGH (Allegheny Co.) - Dairy farmer-funded promotion organizations have launched the largest-ever cheese advertising and promotion campaign funded by America's dairy farmers. The new campaign kicks off this month.

"This exciting plan represents a new era for the industry," says Cindy Weimer, spokesperson for the Pennsylvania Dairy Promotion Program, which includes dairy farmers in 33 counties in western and north-central Pennsylvania. "Research studies indicate there is stronger than ever consumer demand for cheese and cheese products. This new promotional campaign is designed to tap that interest to increase cheese consumption from the current 28.6 pounds per person annually to 31 pounds per person by the year 2000," Weimer says.

By developing a coordinated $181 million marketing partnership between dairy farmer and dairy processor organizations (Milk Processor Education Program) to promote fluid milk, more dairy farmer dollars are available to promote cheese. In fact, farmer-funded national cheese spending increased by more than 40 percent over 1997 funding levels.

Weimer says the cornerstone of the cheese campaign is the new national advertising campaign that touches the hearts and the taste buds of consumers, with the tagline "Behold the power of Cheese.™" marketing efforts are targeted to two key consumer segments with the greatest long-term growth potential, cheese "cravers" and "enhancers," which currently account for 44 percent of all at-home cheese consumption.

The humorous television ads feature people who demonstrate that they will go to nearly any length to get their hands on cheese. In doing so, they show their appreciation for their love of cheese in sometimes unconventional ways to cleverly illustrate "the power of cheese." The new cheese campaign also includes print advertising, retail promotion, public relations and foodservice marketing efforts.

ANSWER — Jeannie Donaldson, Port Murray, N.J., recommends "On Food and Cooking—The Science Lore of the Kitchen," by Harold McGee. As the title suggests, it's a chemistry class and very fascinating. It's a Collier book by MacMillan Publishing. If you can't find it in the bookstore, use this "ISBN" number to order it. ISBN0-02-034621-2.

ANSWER — Valerie Harlan, Parkesburg, wanted a recipe for "real red taffy apples" with taffy that pulls away not the crackle type. Thanks to Stan Kitchen, Dallas, for sending the following recipe varieties.

Candy Apples On A Stick

Wash and polish apples. Remove stems and blossom end. Push skewers well down into stem end. Set aside while preparing syrup. When syrup is ready, dip apples in one at a time, twirling around so as to completely cover apple. Place on a buttered plate or wax paper to cool and harden. Use any of the following syrups:

Bright red: Mix together 3 cups sugar, 1/4 teaspoon cream of tartar, 1/4 teaspoon salt, 1 cup water, and a few drops red food coloring. Boil rapidly until syrup forms a rather brittle thread when it is dropped in cold water. Do not stir while cooking. Remove from heat and dip apples.

Caramel #1: Combine 1 cup sugar, 1/2 cup light corn syrup, 1 large can sweetened condensed milk, and pinch of salt. Cook together until mixture forms a soft ball when a little is dropped in cold water. Remove from heat; add 1 teaspoon vanilla. Dip apples.

Caramel #2: Melt one pound caramels in the top of a double boiler over boiling water. Add 2 tablespoons water and blend. Remove from heat and dip apples.

For variety: Apples may be dipped in chopped nuts, shredded coconut, or crisp rice cereal immediately after being coated with syrup.

Agri-Tourism Offers Promise

HONESDALE (Wayne Co.) — There are a growing number of farmers who are tapping consumer interest in farm-based recreation and hospitality in northeast Pennsylvania.

Farm-based bed and breakfast operations have a long history in Pennsylvania, and opportunities exist for those with the right skills and resources.

The key to starting a successful agri tourist enterprise is to understand the management challenges before welcoming your first guest.

In order to help farm families learn about the promise and pitfalls of starting an agritourist business, Wayne County Cooperative Extension will be co-hosting an all-day workshop called Agricultural Alternatives at the Honesdale High School on March 14.

This educational workshop is aimed at farmers, landowners, and entrepreneurs interested in exploring alternative agricultural enterprises for their land and farms. Speakers will address topics such as small business development, agritourism, alternative livestock and crops, as well as setting up food processing businesses. The event is a collaborative effort between Penn State Cooperative Extension, the Wayne County Conservation District, and Pocono Resource and Conservation District.

The workshop's featured speaker will be Duncan Hilchey, a agricultural development specialist with Cornell Cooperative Extension, who will discuss agritourism opportunities and challenges. Hilchey has written extensively on farm-based recreation businesses, direct marketing, and small-scale food processing enterprises. His presentation will cover key management issues and concerns in starting and maintaining a successful agri tourism enterprise, including marketing safety, insurance, and profitability.

Those interested can register by contacting the Wayne County Cooperative Extension office at (717)253-5970. The workshop costs $10 and this includes a buffet lunch and handout materials.

To register by mail, send your name, address, phone number, and a check payable to extension special account to Agricultural Alternatives Workshop, Wayne County Cooperative Extension, 925 Court Street, Honesdale, PA 18431.

Cook's Question

ANSWER — Pam Laubach, Orangeville, wanted a recipe for chewy sugar cookies similar to those sold at malls and a recipe for animal crackers. Here's a recipe from Gloria Sweigart, Manheim.

Rolled Sugar Cookies

Cream together:

- 2 cups sugar
- 1 cup shortening (room temperature)
- 3 eggs
- 2 teaspoons vanilla

Add:

- 5 cups flour
- 4 teaspoons baking powder
- 1 teaspoon baking soda
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 1 cup milk

Mix together well, add enough more flour to make dough thick enough to roll. Roll and cut with cookie cutters or just cut into rectangular pieces. Bake at 375 degrees about 12 minutes.

ANSWER — Carl Schintzel, Rockaway, N.J., wanted a recipe for seasoned rice with cubed pieces of veal. Thanks to Stan Kitchen, Dallas, for sending recipes.

Beef or Veal Round With Rice

- 1 quart hot boiled rice
- 3 tablespoons lard
- 2 dry onions
- 7 green onions
- 2 pounds beef or veal round
- 3 tablespoons flour
- 1 can tomato paste
- Salt and pepper

Trim meat and put in skillet with lard, salt, and pepper. Fry well and when brown, add flour, dry onion, chopped fine, tomato paste; fry a few minutes more then add gradually two cups water. Allow this to cook slowly, adding water until the skillet is almost full of water and then add, after an hour's cooking, green onions, chopped fine. This meat requires about two hours' slow boiling in the gravy. Be sure to add water from time to time to keep skillet almost full, turning the meat over every 15 minutes. The gravy is delicious and should be served with boiled rice.

Rice Ragout

- 1 cup rice
- 3 quarts water
- 1 tablespoon salt
- 2 pounds chuck steak or veal, cubed
- 4 cups canned tomatoes
- 1 large onion
- 1 clove garlic
- 10 whole cloves

- 2 teaspoons salt
- Pepper

Sear meat cubes in a deep kettle; add tomatoes, onion, garlic, cloves, and salt, and simmer for about two hours or until meat is tender. Remove the clove of garlic and serve at once over hot boiled rice. If you prefer a thick sauce, remove the meat when tender and reduce the liquid about one half. Cook the rice. Serve on a round chop dish with rice heaped in center of dish and meat and gravy around.

6 1-cup servings.

Fountains For Youth At York Flower Show

ANDY ANDREWS

Lancaster Farming Staff

YORK (York Co.) — Erin and Evan Farrell made quick study of their dad's steady supply of coins.

One plop, two plop, three . . .

Both were making lots of wishes as they tossed the coins, heads over tails, into the rippling water.

Then along came Timmy Grim, also from Dover, with some coins.

Close your eyes, make a wish, and toss the coin, kerplunk, into the wishing well. . .

A lot of hopes and dreams came true for many of the children who visited the magical York Garden and Flower Show recently.

When the day opened late last week at the York Fairgrounds, not only did Erin, 5 and Evan, 3 spend time tossing coins. (They were "helping" their mom and dad, Karla and Vinnie Farrell, Dover, with the family's display.) But other children were also on hand helping parents display the fine flower products from all around.

Daniel Butera was helping mom, Carolyn, and dad, Vince, with their Butera the Florist display at the show. Cheyanne Mills, 10, daughter of Mark and Lori Mills, Cooksburg, helped with flower arrangements at the family display.

And some kids were just along for the ride, sending coins along their magical destiny at a few of the stands.

Not to mention the fountains. Farrell's had a running waterfall. So did other displays. They included Ardell's. Also, the "umbrella" fountain at Hively Farm and Nursery, Dover attracted a lot of visitors. And Miller's Garden Center, Red Lion, also featured a fountain.

While Timmy Grim, 4, son of Tanya Grim, Dover, spent time pitching coins (and concentrating real hard on wishes), Vinnie Farrell spoke about the family's "water landscape" display at the show. Farrell noted that this is the fourth or fifth year of the show, at which they greet hundreds of people through the weekend.

At the Butera display, Daniel, 11, who is home-schooled, helped with the displays. Vince, his dad, said the florist shop sells cut flowers, including fresh and artificial. Vince noted this was his fourth year as an exhibitor and said he'd seen "lots of garden enthusiasts" at the show.

Last year, he said, on Saturday, "this place was packed."

Cheyenne Mills, 10, daughter of Mark and Lori Mills, helped with her family business, which sells a three-tier stackable flower base, made out of hand-crafted glass, containing fresh roses. This is the third or fourth year they've exhibited at the show. They make their home north of Piusburgh.

Those who attended enjoyed the show, held through March 1.

Visitors included Jodi Nispel,

Windsor, with her daughters Cheridee, 3 and Anjewel, 5. And Janice Thompson, Spring Grove, enjoyed "tasting the dip at the herb place," she said. She brought along Melissa, 6, and Matthew, 5.

An Early Spring - What to do?

There isn't all that much that we can do about the early emergence of spring flowering bulbs and perennials. Take steps now to keep the soil temperatures as cool as possible for as long as possible.

Maintain a good layer of loose-textured mulch over the planting soil to insulate against temperature fluctuations. Avoid thick, heavy mulch. It tends to smother more than insulate. A layer of dry oak leaves or similar textured mulch would be ideal.

A layer of loose mulch over the tops of emerging shoots or perennial plants also helps to protect them against rapid temperature changes. In general, emerging leaf shoots are quite hardy and take freezing temperatures with no real damage. Injury to flower stalks which are deeper into the bulb at the shoot base are often not injured this early. Subfreezing temperatures for extended periods of time may result in some danger to bulbs and crown damage on perennials.

If all the mulch idea fails to sustain dormancy in the plants, plan to enjoy the floral displays earlier than normal this year. Generally plants retain some degree of dormancy until daily temperatures remain above freezing for several days.

Flowering trees and shrubs that have initiated growth and flowering as a result of the warmer weather may retain some degree of dormancy as long as extended periods of warmer weather do not occur. Once full flower development starts, no dormancy remains in the plant. Any plants that produce fully open flowers at this time of year will probably not set fruit later in the season. Poor or absent pollination or freeze injury to fruit will result.

Plants in protected locations or near building foundations, pavements, and stone walls may get leaves earlier than normal. Woody plants that sustain significant vegetative and flower bud injury should be kept well-watered during dry periods. This reduces the impact of stress on the foliage needed to provide food reserves for the next growing season.

On a cultural note, it is important to keep all bulb foliage in good growing condition throughout the spring and summer to rebuild bulb quality in the soil. Very often gardeners mow off the leaves when the bulbs fail to flower for any reason. If the foliage is cut off too soon, the plants are weakened and may not produce quality blossoms next season and beyond. All foliage on plants in the spring and summer puts food energy back into a bulb below ground in order to produce a flower stalk and more foliage next season.

All plants have survival mechanisms to combat adverse weather conditions. Dormant buds in the stems and crowns of most plants may produce later growth to replace injured buds killed by spring freezes. A light pruning to remove damaged wood, or cutting back to a live stem or branch helps to retain the quality, shape and form of the plant throughout the coming summer. Eliminate any environmental stress on injured plants. Avoid excessive pruning this coming season.

Supporters Gather For Banquet

GAY BROWNLEE

Somerset Co. Correspondent
BERLIN (Somerset Co.) — Supporters numbered 230 at the Berlin-Brothersvalley Chapter's 59th annual banquet held during National FFA Week.

Supporters believe the FFA is an organization that builds leadership in today's youth — those who with knowledge of and respect for agriculture will be its leaders as a new century begins. They include:

- Nathan Croner, the gold-medal, first-place grower of corn. His one acre produced 171 bushels

- Jeremy Walters, a rising star in the maple industry who is building his own maple camp, working hard to develop the business and winner of the State Star Award for Specialized Agriculture.

- Jason Baughman, a senior at Penn State who earned the American FFA Degree who in the near future will receive a dairy science degree at college.

- The 21 FFA members whose academic standards in addition to FFA responsibilities found their names on the high school honor roll

- Youths whose FFA journey is just beginning as witnessed when the first-ever pins and certificates were accepted.

While "FFA — Building the Future" is an apt theme, realistic construction requires the element of patience, even in the FFA.

As Joanna Wilson, guest speaker, said, "Success is a destination we reach by waiting."

She is vice president of the western region and with Jessica Whiting, treasurer of the state

Top-three in the One-Acre Corn Growing Contest in the Brothersvalley FFA are from left, Justin VanGilder, third; Jason VanGilder, second and Nathan Croner, first.

An American FFA Degree plaque is presented to Jason Baughman, left, by Brothersvalley FFA adviser Doyle Paul. The son of Melvin and Bonnie Baughman, Glencoe, Jason is the 26th Brothersvalley FFA member to receive the highest FFA designation.

FFA association, was an honored guest at Brothersvalley FFA Chapter banquet.

Gold medals were presented to the chapter demonstration team of Justin Hillegass, Justin VanGilder, and Jason VanGilder, named first in the county and 7th in the state.

Receiving state FFA degree plaques were Jeremy Walter, Joel Smiley and Brian Fisher. Their parents are Harold and Patricia Walters, Jeff and Janie Smiley, and Jeffrey and Kathy Fisher.

For their achievements last summer at Penn State FFA Activities: Lottie Sell, gold medal — state FFA delegate; Justin Lorson, bronze medal — Wildlife Judging Contest; Chapter Scrapbook — gold medal; Parliamentary Procedure Team — silver medal; Bruce Hartman, PVATA Scholarship Award.

Kidney Transplant Gives Farm Wife New Lease On Life

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff
LITITZ (Lancaster Co.)—Faye Myer has a new lease on life. "I wouldn't be here," she said, "if it weren't for receiving a kidney."

A farm wife, Faye always ate a nutritious diet, stayed within her weight range, and maintained a healthy lifestyle. Normally energetic, Faye was nonplussed when she felt a constant nagging fatigue about five years ago.

At first, the doctor diagnosed high blood pressure, but all efforts to lower it proved fruitless. Puzzled, the doctor ordered extensive testing about two years after she began doctoring.

That's when the diagnosis was made that Faye had two diseased kidneys.

"They do not know what caused it," Faye said. "It's possible high blood pressure caused it; on the other hand, the high blood pressure might have been the result of diseased kidneys."

For almost a year after the diagnosis, Faye was able to live a fairly normal life by taking medication and resting often. But it was scary to know that she was expected to become very ill before losing complete function in both kidneys. Blood tests were taken every week to monitor levels.

In January 1995, Faye needed to undergo a hysterectomy. Doctors were alarmed because the anesthesia is considered poison to diseased kidneys and a complete shut down was expected.

Although tests showed the numbers were on a downward slide, doctors approved a tour to the Holy Lands that Faye and her husband Jim were scheduled to lead. Jim combines farming with pastoring at White Oak Church of the Brethren and with traveling evangelism.

Their suitcases were packed. But one week before their scheduled departure, Faye received the fateful call.

"Everything came crashing down then. The blood results showed severe damage," Faye said. That was in March 1995.

Despite her pleas to participate in the planned tour because she was feeling fine, the doctor forewarned her that she was going to get extremely sick and that she absolutely should not leave the country.

The doctor's predictions were accurate. A week later, Faye became seriously ill. She underwent an operation to have a catheter inserted in her stomach in preparation for peritoneal dialysis. Nightly, she hooked up to the dialysis machine for eight hours of cleansing.

Faye's name was added to a list for kidney transplants. She was number 250, and told that it would probably take one to two years before a match could be found.

About three months after her name was placed on the list, Faye received a phone call that a kidney was available that was a close match to hers.

"You are number two on the list. Pack your bags and be ready to come," she was told by the Hershey Medical Center.

The Myers were just ready to go out to eat with friends. They placed the beeper and a mobile phone under the table in the restaurant when the call came.

The kidney had gone to someone else.

The news was discouraging. Also discouraging was the nauseous feeling that plagued her. Thinking there could be another problem, the doctor arranged an appointment with a specialist. Before the scheduled appointment, Faye received another call when she and her husband were visiting at her daughter's home for Sunday dinner.

This time, she was told a perfect match was found. The kidney was from a 14-year-old boy who had been killed in an accident in Oklahoma.

The kidney, packed in ice, was being flown to Hershey and the operation was to begin between one and 2 a.m., Faye was told.

The Myers were ecstatic. A perfect match is extremely rare. The closer the match, the greater the chance that the transplant will not be rejected.

Jim and Faye went to Hershey Medical Center immediately. Preparations for the operation were made and fluids drained from her. But the scheduled time for the operation passed and the family became alarmed that something may have gone wrong. But at 8 a.m. on Oct 9, 1995, doctors began the operation that lasted until 2 a.m. the following morning.

Although Faye felt extremely sick for several days, she was told that the minute the kidney was in place, it started working, which is considered unusual.

Although she still felt ill, Faye was sent home from the hospital the following Sunday after the operation. For a few weeks she battled depression, no doubt a side effect of the operation, but she continued to grow stronger.

Today Faye mostly feels like her perky self.

"I need to rest more often, but many people tell me that tiring more easily is typical of my age," Faye said. She is 57.

She and her husband Jim have four married children and 10 grandchildren. She often babysits the grandchildren and entertains family and friends.

Jim and Faye recently moved from their large farm that bordered Speedwell Lake to one of their smaller farms a mile to the east. The Myers crop farm and raise steers. A son took over the larger family farm.

Faye enjoys cooking, baking, entertaining, counted cross stitch, reading, and working in flower beds.

As is standard practice, Faye was put on anti-rejection medicine that she will need to continue for the rest of her life. She needs to swallow 19 pills daily. The medicine has unpleasant side effects — hair growth, weight gain, and puff-iness in the face. At first, it seemed overwhelming to count out all the pills, but now Faye has a regular regime and considers it part of her daily duties.

Before Faye needed a kidney transplant, she could not fathom the joy that organ donations bring to others. Now she is strong supporter of organ donation.

While the side effects of the medicine are unpleasant, Faye says cheerily, "It's the price that I pay to live."

Since her kidney transplants, new medicines have been developed with less side effects. But doctors are reluctant to change her medicine since she is doing so well medically. Switching medicines now could cause medical problems.

"The support of my family and friends has really been important throughout this," Faye said. "Above all I thank the Lord. I think it's really a miracle how everything worked out so well."

Every three months, Faye returns to Hershey Medical Center for a checkup, and she sees a kidney specialist monthly.

"The numbers have always been excellent," Faye said of the calculations that reflect kidney function.

"The transplant has really given me a new lease on life. Some people ask me if it's really worth the pain of the operation. It definitely is. I have a really good life compared to depending on dialysis."

Faye doesn't know the name of the family of the 14-year-old donor, but she was able to write a letter of thanks to be passed on to the family.

"It's wonderful that people donate their organs. It's something that never entered my mind until I needed one," Faye said.

Now she herself plans to donate her organs.

The need for donor organs is urgent. According to the Dept. of Health, especially needed are eyes, kidneys, hearts, livers, lungs, pancreata, ear bones, ear drums, other bones, and skin.

You can give someone else life by donating an organ or other tissues after death to those who are critically ill and in need of a transplant. If you prefer, you can donate your entire body for medical educational purposes. Donation of the body is not necessary, however, in order to donate specific organs and tissues.

Each time you renew your driver's license, you will be asked if you want the "Organ Donor" designation on your license.

The words will be permanently placed on the driver's license when you say "yes."

Previously issued licenses will remain valid until its expiration dates and may be used with an "Organ Donor" sticker available from the Pa. Dept. of Health or by calling 1-800-692-7254.

After indicating your wishes as a donor, you must sign the card in the presence of two witnesses, who then must sign the card in your presence. Witnesses do not need to be family members but they must be 18 years or older.

In specifying your donation on the card, if you check (A), any needed organs or tissues, it means that any organs and tissues needed at the time of your death may be removed for transplantation. Your body will be returned to your family for services and burial.

If you check (B), only the organs or tissues specified, then only the organs you check in the boxes on the list will be donated. Your body will be returned to your family for services or burial.

If you check (C), "my body for anatomical study," you are indicating your desire to donate your entire body for medical research and educational purposes.

Contact Humanity Gifts Registry for additional information at 130 S. 9th St., Suite 1550, P.O. Box 835, Philadelphia, PA 19105-0835 or call (215) 922-4440.

Next-of-kin can also donate the body or organs if the deceased did not sign a donor card.

By the time a will is read, it is too late to make use of donated organs or tissues. Make sure your next-of-kin and physician are aware of your wishes.

A history of poor health does not rule out organ donation. A complete medical assessment will be made at the time of death. This will reveal those tissues and organs that are acceptable.

No additional costs are incurred by organ donations. Neither are payments made to the donor's heirs.

To find more out about transplants, call 1-800-893-1995. The web site address is www.ktppp.com.

After the successful kidney transplant Jim and Faye Myer built a home on their farm. Although this was exciting, Faye finds pleasure in ordinary happenings such as birds singing and flowers growing. "It's like getting a new lease on life," she said.

Junior Firefighters

The Water Works Fire Company and the North Mountain 4-H Club are forming a new club for Junior Firefighters.

Did you know Pennsylvania has at least one death from fire every other day? Records show that it is young children and older adults who are most likely to die in fires. Right now, a house, farm, or a public building is on fire somewhere.

Fire is the type of problem that kills people and destroys property. We must become concerned about fire before it happens to us. We must all work to prevent fires from happening by learning what causes fires, how to prevent fires, how fires spread, and how fires can be detected.

In case a fire does get started, we must know how to put out the fire.

The club is to be open to all youth aged 14 or older. According to Phil Binkley, one of the adults involved with starting the club, many fire companies will allow youth aged 14 or older to volunteer in fire fighting. That is viewed as an age when youth can generally begin to accept the responsibilities, subject matter, and physical skills necessary to start basic fire fighting and safety training.

If you have any questions concerning this club, call Phil Binkley at (717)867-4478 fire-hall president or Fran Bushong leader of North Mountain 4-H club at (717)865-6270.

ANSWER — Gail Sherry, Thomasville, wanted information on twilling for quilts. Thanks to Vera Nolt, New Holland, for giving the following directions:

Materials: embroidery hoop

Satin sheen thread

Desired fabric and needle

Draw desired design on the right side of the fabric with a pencil.

Hold the fabric taut in the hoop.

Thread the needle. Bring the needle up through fabric just to the left edge of design line at point A leaving a 1-inch tail underneath.

Insert needle to right of design line about ¼-inch below starting point A. Catch tail underneath as you bring needle up directly beside last stitch on left edge of line (point B in diagram).

Slide needle from right to left under stitch just taken. Draw thread so it is snug but not too tight. Let some thread hang down to left of stitch.

To make next stitch, insert needle to right of design a little less than ¼-inch below last stitch and continue as before.

Do not make any knots on the wrong side of fabric. Slide end under stitches and catch beginning tails.

Ida's Notebook

Ida Risser

My father's 1919 diary is interesting to me and might be to you too. He had just purchased a 55-acre farm and on Sunday he "walked around the place."

Furniture was moved on a wagon and a load of wood followed to stoke the stove for cooking and heating. He got one red cow and one heifer from his home plus 11 chickens. A load of hay and one of fodder came from his home on a nearby farm.

One of his first jobs was cutting 10 bushel of potatoes into pieces for planting. His tobacco beds were steamed and he got a hired boy. Then he picked out some nice ears of corn and shelled them by hand for seed.

Their two horses, Ben and Fred, were taken to a blacksmith about three miles away. They pulled the two-horse wagon to the mill to have corn ground for much and also to buy oats. He bought a Yankee harness for $24.50. Money was needed for taxes, an iron trough, and white wash lime.

He cradled the wheat field to open it for the binder. The sheaves were tied by hand and sweet potatoes were planted. Later these four bushels were peddled on the streets of Lancaster.

There was constant work as horse stalls were built and a stone wall laid for the pig pen, a gate had to be hung at the fenced in garden and stones and stumps were hauled off of the fields.

He washed his buggy for Sunday church and got a week's groceries at the local store. My parents never spent more than two or three dollars a week for food - even in later years. In July they drove to the Welsh Mountains and picked huckleberries.

A tobacco buyer got stuck on the muddy road and had to be pulled out with horses. The tobacco was sold for 20 cents for wrappers and six cents for fillers. Corn was all husked by hand and several hogs were butchered in the fall.

There was no end to work on the farm, and that is one thing that has not changed even to this day.

MILK PROFITS INCREASE FOR PA. FARMER

Darryl Trego of Thompsontown, Pa., has found a way to increase milk production while reducing cost!

Since he started using Vitamix; Darryl Trego of Thompsontown, Pa., has seen fewer cases of mastitis. When he does have a cow with mastitis; he notices that it clears up quicker.

The only defense the cow has against infections like mastitis and other infections and contagious diseases such as the cold, flu, etc., etc., is white blood cells. Antibiotics damage the immune system and reduce the ability to produce those white blood cells. That is why so often, cows have relapses after going off antibiotics. You can avoid that damage to the immune system when you quit using antibiotics.

Vitamix is a natural blend of vitamins, minerals, enzymes and proteins. Vitamix costs less than antibiotics and you can get Vitamix without a prescription because it is all natural and completely free of all drugs.

Mr. Trego feeds Formula M to all cows TWICE a day every day. Trego says he has seen milk production go up and milk production is more consistent. Trego prefers to see the cows milk production more consistent rather than drop off near the end of the lactation.

Vitamix and Formula M have reduced the cost of producing milk while production increased.

Penn. State Names Former Hershey Executive As Professor Of Agribusiness

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) - Barry L. Zoumas, recently retired vice president of science and technology with Hershey Foods Corp., has been named Alan R. Warehime Professor of Agribusiness in Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences.

The professorship was endowed in 1989 by Alan R. Warehime, the late president of Hanover Foods, to "enhance the college's commitment to the development of agribusiness leaders." The Warehime professor will develop a program integrating business, economics, and international perspectives into the college's academic courses and act as a catalyst for collaborative projects in agribusiness education and research across departments in the college and the university.

"My assignment as Warehime professor is to integrate my business experience with the future needs of the college," Zoumas said. "I'll also stress giving students a perspective on the agricultural industry so they will be better prepared to meet the needs of the agribusiness community."

"If Penn State is to prepare 'society-ready' graduates, we need to know what industry's definition of society-ready is," said Robert Steele, dean of the college. "This partnership allows us to tap those who will hire our graduates for input that we can incorporate into our curricula. Internships and scholarships enable our students to gain experience in industry settings and help industry know the skills and knowledge of our graduates."

Zoumas spent most of his business career at Hershey Foods, starting as the manager of nutritional sciences in 1970. Until his Penn State appointment, he was the chief technical officer at the corporation for 16 years, serving on the staff of three chief executive officers. As a member of the Corporate Planning Committee, he participated in strategic decisions that expanded the company ten-fold.

Zoumas provided leadership for more than 300 employees. During his tenure, his staff developed new products worth more than $600 million. He also was responsible for implementing the modernization of all chocolate manufacturing systems and the construction of three new manufacturing facilities.

During his career, Zoumas was responsible for all agribusiness programs, including a cocoa plantation in Central America. He also directed the corporate milk procurement program, supervising contracts with more than 800 Pennsylvania dairy farmers. He served as Hershey's liaison and spokesman to governmental regulatory agencies and was the company's principal contact with trade associations and scientific organizations.

His international experience is extensive. He served as principal adviser to U.S. Aid for Agricultural Development in the Caribbean area and worked in Belize, Haiti, the Dominican Republic, Guatemala and Brazil. He was a visiting scientist for six months at the Food and Agricultural Organization of the United Nations in 1997.

Zoumas' agricultural research for Hershey included plant breeding, fermentation, microbiology and integrated pest management. He started major research programs on peanuts and almonds to control aflatoxin and improve quality. He also began new breeding programs for peanuts and almonds, and oversaw Hershey's biotechnology program, which focused on the molecular biology of cocoa.

Zoumas was named Hershey's director of research in 1976 and was promoted to director of research and development in 1979. In 1981, he was promoted to his final position and assumed additional responsibilities as vice president, technical, for Hershey Chocolate USA.

He earned a bachelor's degree in chemistry from Kutztown University in 1964. Continuing his education at Penn State, Zoumas earned a master's degree in nutrition in 1966 and

Pa. Shorthorn Breeders Meet

PROSPECT (Butler Co.) - Members of the Pennsylvania Shorthorn Cattle Breeders Association held their annual membership dinner meeting Feb. 21 here at the Garden Gate Restaurant.

Evening speaker was Donald Hunter, livestock extension specialist for Butler, Lawrence, and Armstrong counties. Hunter's topic was "marketing." He mentioned exhibiting at county fairs, participating in bull test programs, and being active in local and state cattle organizations.

An important aspect is the "follow up" after a sale, in addition to promptness in providing registration papers and farm visits to check on an animal's progress. Participation in breed sales and club calf sales was mentioned.

The association agreed to cancel its spring sale because of lack of entries. The Pennsylvania State Show will be held at the Hookstown Fairgrounds July 18.

Members agreed to give financial support to the Tri-State Classic Show to be held at Waynesburg Fairgrounds May 2 and 3. The Association will also contribute to the North West Junior Beef Classic at the Butler Fairgrounds May 23 and 24.

Eric Peoples, Volant; Robert Scott, Butler; Alan Beck, Leighton; and Robert MyLaughlin were elected directors for three-year terms. The 1997 officers were re-elected for 1998. An Early Spring — What To Do?

BOB NUSS Horticulture Professor
Penn State

There isn't all that much that we can do about the early emergence of spring flowering bulbs and perennials. Steps to keep the soil temperatures as cool as possible for as long as possible would be about all any gardeners would be able to accomplish. Maintain a good layer of loose-textured mulch over the planting soil to insulate against temperature fluctuations. A thick, heavy mulch may tend to smother more than insulate and should be avoided. A layer of dry oak leaves or similar texture would be ideal.

Layers of loose mulch over the tops of the emerging shoots will also help to protect them against rapid temperature changes that could result in freezing and subsequent damage to the plant. In general, however, the emerging shoot can be quite hardy and take freezing temperatures with no real damage. There may be some injury to the leaf shoots that emerge early, but much more often, the actual flower stalk is deeper into the bulb and shoot base and is not injured to any degree. Subfreezing temperatures for extended periods of time may result in some bulb/crown damage to bulbs and perennials.

If all this fails to sustain dormancy in the plants, we will probably just have to enjoy the floral display at this time of year while it is present. Generally plants will retain some degree of dormancy until the daily temperatures remain above freezing for a number of days.

There is not much that can be done for flowering trees and shrubs that have initiated growth and flowering as a result of the warmer weather. Like the bulbs and perennials, these will retain some degree of dormancy as long as we do not have extended periods of warmer weather that may stimulate full flower development. Any plants that produce fully open flowers at this time of year will probably not set fruit later in the season. Poor or absent pollination, or freeze injury to potential fruit, will be the cause in most cases.

All plants in protected locations where there may be concentrations of heat from building foundations, pavements, and stone walls may continue to develop because of their location. Not much can be done to slow this process. Woody plants that sustain significant vegetative and flower bud injury should be kept well-watered during dry periods to reduce the impact of stress on the foliage needed to provide food reserves for the next growing season.

On a cultural note, it is important to keep all bulb foliage in good growing condition throughout the spring and summer to rebuild bulb quality in the soil. Very often gardeners will mow off the leaves when the bulbs fail to flower for any reason. If the foliage is cut off too soon and not allowed to go through the growing season and decline on its own, the plants will be weakened and may not produce quality blossoms next season and beyond. Gardeners must realize that the spring/summer foliage puts food energy back into the bulb below ground so it can produce a flower stalk and foliage for the next season.

All plants have various survival mechanisms to combat adverse weather conditions. Dormant buds in the stems and crowns of most plants will be initiated into growth to replace what may be injured in spring freezes. Light pruning to remove damaged wood, or cutting back to alive stem or branch will help to retain the quality, shape and form of the plant throughout the coming season. Elimination of growing stress on any injured plant will do wonders to insure its survival and success in the coming seasons.

Ohio Turkey Industry Needs More 'Good Eggs'

WOOSTER, Ohio — The quality of an egg yolk is no joke — especially to the developing chicks or poults (baby turkeys) that depend on it for survival.

All developing avian embryos — chickens, turkeys and ducks — derive most of their energy during incubation from the fat (lipids) found in the yolk. Individual fatty acids are the building blocks of all lipids. There are six or seven principal fatty acids within yolk lipids.

Mike Lilburn is an animal scientist located at the Ohio Agricultural Research and Development Center's Wooster campus. Lilburn and his colleagues recognize the importance of fatty acids to developing turkey embryos. They're studying the relationship between the fatty acid of diets fed to breeder hens and the subsequent fatty acid profile of lipids in yolks and developing embryos. Research that may alter the fatty acid profile of yolk lipids might have beneficial effects on developing embryos.

"We can change the types of fatty acids in the yolk by putting hens on a particular diet," Lilburn said. "Oil from coconuts, for example, contains a unique pattern of shorter chain fatty acids and while these fatty acids show up in the yolk, they don't show up in the embryo."

This suggests that these fatty acids may be preferentially metabolized by the embryo and may have beneficial effects on overall embryonic development.

"Our work with coconut oil is one aspect of our ongoing embryonic studies," Lilburn said. "It's a sideline project from a whole series of studies aimed at better understanding how yolk fat is utilized by the developing embryo."

Lilburn said studying shorter-chain fatty acids like those in coconut oil is one piece of a larger puzzle. When those pieces finally make a picture, he'll be in a better position to suggest ways of enhancing the overall productive ability of turkey hens, particularly young hens.

"We know that young hens lay smaller eggs than older hens, and these smaller eggs have smaller yolks. This results in smaller poults," he said. "We are trying to find ways of enhancing the whole reproductive process, and that begins with a better understanding of embryonic development."

The puzzle will be complete when Lilburn can suggest ways to produce thrifty, viable poults from both young and old hens.

"The main thrust of our research focuses on young hens and why their poults lack the vitality of poults from older hens," Lilburn said. "By finding ways to increase production of young hens, we can increase the economical impact of the poultry industry."

Last October, Lilburn spoke at an international meeting on turkey reproduction, and in April, he will discuss his research at a conference in Manchester, England.

The poultry industry is important to Ohio. According to the Ohio Agricultural Statistics Service, Ohio ranks first in the nation in both table egg production and in overall poultry production. Lilburn wants to help maintain that rank by improving production.

Cornell Announces Two New Potato Varieties

LIVERPOOL, N.Y. — Two new potato varieties developed by Cornell University potato breeder Robert Plaisted have potential for the round white tablestock and chipstock markets. Both are resistant to the golden nematode, a pest unique to New York State that weakens the roots and significantly impacts yield.

"Salem" is an early-emerging, mid-season potato with high yielding ability, bred for table stock," said Plaisted, who has been the potato breeder at Cornell since 1956. The tuber shape is round to oblong and slightly flattened. Skin texture is smooth and bright. Dry matter is low, so "Salem" is a good choice for a moist baking potato. It may have a faint yellowish cast when boiled. Tuber dormancy is about two weeks longer than "Katahdin" or "Atlantic," and marketable yields in New York trials have been greater than either of those two varieties. Tuber size is like that of "Katahdin," according to Plaisted, who said plants emerge early and tubers start sizing early.

"Salem" is resistant to the golden nematode and to common scab. It is a cross between "Rosa" and NY66 [BR6862-2 and Hudson] It was first evaluated as D146-11 and then as NY84.

Five growers will be offering certified "Salem" seed in 1998, including Royce Atwater, Childstock Farms, Inc., Bob Leavitt Farms, Gary Pryputniewicz Farm, and Windy Mt. Farm.

"Reba" is a high-yielding variety with potential for both the round white tablestock and potato chip market," said Plaisted. The tubers are round and have a bright, white skin. Boiling quality is good. The chip color has been equal to or better than "Monona" from storage at 45 degrees F. A mid- to late-season variety, "Reba" sizes early and can produce large tubers. Plaisted reports that in 86 trials over seven years, the marketable yield has been 108 percent of "Atlantic." The best performance has been at 7-inches to 9-inches and 150 pounds of nitrogen.

Meat Eval. Center Announces Results

UNIVERSITY PARK, (Centre Co.) - The Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture's Meat Animal Evaluation Center wishes to announce the 84-day results of the Bull Performance Testing Program.

Seventy-three outstanding bulls are on test this year. The group consists of 32 Angus, 22 Polled Herefords, 15 Simmentals, two Charolais, and two Limousin. The 32 Angus (including two Red Angus), maintained a group average daily gain of 3.98 pounds per day through 84 days with a lifetime weight per day of age of 3.31 pounds.

The top-gaining Angus bull is the DHD Traveler 6807 son owned by Marlin and Steve Paul. The 5.01 pounds per day this bull recorded through 84 days is the top gain overall breeds.

The second fastest gaining Angus is the EHF Fortune 3060 son of ErRer Hills Farms, who gained 4.76 pounds per day.

The top-gaining Polled Hereford bull is the KWR Sharpshooter son consigned by Dan Dye. This bull gained 4.77 pounds per day. The second-fastest gaining Polled Hereford, the HF5D Fast Forward son owned by Frank Granbery III, gained 4.71 pounds per day through the 84 days. The 22 Polled Hereford bulls achieved an average daily gain of 3.93 pounds per day and a lifetime weight per day of age of 3.33 pounds.

The 15 Simmentals on test gained an average of 3.87 pounds per day and maintained a lifetime weight per day of age of 3.49 pounds. The top gaining Simmental bull is the Red Light 406D son owned by Penn State University. The second-fastest gaining Simmental was the full blood bull consigned by Harold Simms. This Loki son gained 4.80 pounds per day on test.

The top-gaining Limousin bull is the Wulfs Quarterback son which gained 4.35 pounds per day and was consigned by Corle Land and Cattle Co.

The top-gaining Charolais, consigned by Raymond Bratton, gained 4.07 pounds per day on test and is a son of BCF New Trend 992.

The bulls will all be weighed off test March 3. They will then have their final average daily gain, adjusted 365-day weight, frame score and adjusted fat thickness calculated. The bulls will be scanned ultrasonically to determine fat thickness and estimated loin eye areas. The bulls will undergo a comprehensive breeding soundness exam, including collections and a semen evaluation.

The bulls must meet minimum requirements for structural soundness and breed character. After all of the evaluations, approximately the top 75 percent of the bulls will be selected to be offered in Pennsylvania's 25th Annual Performance Tested Bull Sale scheduled for 11 a.m., Friday, March 27. The bull sale is planned as a central part of Pennsylvania's 9th Annual Beef Expo, which runs March 26 through March 29 at Penn State's Ag Arena.

For more information about the bulls on test, the Pennsylvania Beef Expo, or to request bull sale catalogs, contact Glenn Eberly, Director, Meat Animal Evaluation Center, 651 Fox Hollow Rd., State College, PA 16803, (814)238-2527 or (814)865-5857 message and/or FAX.

Ag Engineering Conference

ERIE (Erie Co.) - An Ag Engineering Conference is scheduled for March 24 at the Mercer County Cooperative Extension office in Mercer. The program will be repeated March 25 at the Northwest Rural Electric Association Building in Cambridge Springs.

This program will address engineering topics related to dairy and animal production, and run from 9:30 a.m. until 3 p.m. Topics will include treatment facilities in freestall/parlor operations, tiestall improvements, dry cow and pre/post fresh housing, lowering capital costs, and manure handling and management beyond the barn.

Speakers include Dr. Richard Stowell, food agricultural and biological engineering, Ohio State University; Dr. Robert Graves, agricultural and biological engineering, Penn State; and John Tyson, agricultural engineering, Erie County Cooperative Extension.

Cost of the conference is $10 for lunch and registrations must be received by March 18. For additional information or registration information, contact John Tyson at the Erie County Cooperative Extension Office, at (814)825-0900.

Dairy Of Distinction Program Again Seeks Nice Looking Farms

STATE COLLEGE (Centre Co.) - Do you take pride in maintaining your dairy farm? Does your dairy farm project an attractive, wholesome image to consumers? If so, the Dairy of Distinction Program of Pennsylvania, New York, and New Jersey, will consider your farm for the program's annual recognition awards.

The Northeast Dairy Farm Beautification Program that oversees the Distinction program was first started in 1983 in Pennsylvania to recognize the hard work and dedication of the farmers who maintain attractive farms. The purpose of the program is to instill a greater sense of confidence in the wholesomeness of dairy products, and increase their sales.

Farms that apply are judged on the roadside appearance of buildings, grounds, and surroundings, since this is what our dairy product consumers observe as they drive by the farm.

The cleanliness of the barnyard, feed areas, and manure management are all areas taken into consideration when a team of judges takes a look at your farm from a roadside point of view. Judging is conducted during the month of May. Award winners are announced during your local June Dairy Month activities.

To qualify for consideration, you must be actively dairy farming and shipping milk.

Applications are available for Pennsylvania dairy farms from Michael O'Conner, 324 Henning Building, Dept. of Dairy and Animal Science, Penn State University, University Park, PA 16802. Phone: (814) 863-3913.

For New York State applications are available from Carol Keene, RD 1, Box 31, Gilbertsville, NY 13776. Phone: (607) 783-2169.

For New Jersey applications, send to: August Knispel, 641 Sidney Road, Pittstown, NJ 08867. Phone: (908) 735-4989.

All applications must be completed and returned to your state secretary by Wednesday, April 15, 1998.

The Dairy of Distinction program is financed in Pennsylvania by Dairy Farmers through the American Dairy Association Dairy Council and Pennsylvania Dairy Promotion Program in cooperation with many local agribusiness organizations. The program is conducted with advice and help from Penn State Cooperative Extension.

HOW IS YOUR FARM SCORED?

Northeast Dairy Farm Beautification Program, Inc.

Awards will be based upon neatness, good maintenance and other factors which can be controlled by the farmer. Attractive background scenery should not be weighed heavily in judging. All judging observations should be made from a vehicle at one or more points on an adjacent public highway (or if farm is off the road, the nearest lane). Judging should give equal consideration to old wood construction and new construction of metal or concrete block.

The award program may be used for subsequent advertising or promotion activities for dairy products or dairy farming. Farmers who apply for awards agree that, if selected they will cooperate with these activities and make all reasonable efforts to maintain both the exterior and interior of their properties in an acceptable condition.

HOW THE APPLICATION WORKS

The owner or operator of the dairy farm should sign the application and send it to NEDFBP secretary by April 15.

HOW THE JUDGING WORKS

Judging teams will visit farms during the month of May. Farms will be judged each year as the award is presented on an annual basis. Any dairy failing to maintain appearance standards will be asked to remove their sign. The Dairy of Distinction signs remain the property of the committee, not the property of the dairy farmer. All farms must achieve a compliance score of 90 percent on their Dairy of Distinction score card. Your cooperative or milk handler will be contacted to approve your milk quality.

RULES FOR THE DAIRY OF DISTINCTION AWARD

1. The Dairy of Distinction sign remains the property of the Northeast Dairy Farm Beautification Committee.
2. The post and bracket shall be supplied by and maintained by the dairy farmer. It is suggested that a wood post 4' x 4' x 12' or iron pipe 2' x 12' be used. Posts or pipe should be installed and maintained in true vertical position with 8' above ground. Top of the bracket should be lower than six inches from the top of the post.
3. Sign shall be displayed in front of the dairy at roadside. An attractive post and bracket, or other frame, shall be used to display the sign. No more than three signs should be displayed from the sign frame or post, and all shall be of a style, general size and quality comparable to the Dairy of Distinction sign. Sign should be secured on all sides to avoid wind damage.
4. Signs shall not be moved to other premises. New owners of a Dairy of Distinction farm must apply to retain the sign.
5. Replacement of damaged signs shall be the discretion of the committee.
6. No producer shall be charged with scoring or sign expense.
7. Judges' decisions will be final.
8. Judging will take place between May 1st and May 31st.
9. Farms awarded a Dairy of Distinction sign in previous years will be judged between April 1st and April 30th. If they do not qualify, they will be rejudged between May 1st and May 31st so they have the opportunity to keep the sign.
10. Farms that do not requalify will return the sign to their regional Dairy of Distinction Committee.

Dairy of Distinction 1998 Pennsylvania Application

PURPOSE OF PROGRAM

Attractive dairy farms give the consumer greater confidence in the wholesomeness of milk and stimulate milk sales which encourages public support for the dairy industry. The award gives recognition to the dairy farmer for maintaining a well-kept farmstead.

NEW FOR THE '98 SEASON

(for our horse farmers)

Accurate seed spacing and precise depth increase yield potential.

- Time-proven positive air metering system and edge drop seed discs gently singulate seeds to eliminate wasteful doubles.
- The short 18" seed drop makes seed spacing accurate.
- Consistent seed depth is assured through our independently operating walking beam gauge wheels... adjust in 1/8" increments.
- Low air pressure gently handles fragile seed coat.
- Fewer moving parts reduce maintenance and downtime.

Reel Time Savings to Real Farmers

"We feed 100 milk cows and a total of 150 animals with four loads per day at three different locations. We save 1 1/2 - 2 hours of feeding time every day with our Knight Reel Auggie tow"

Russ and Kris Schroeder
Agriprize Holsteins - Horicon, Wisconsin

"We feed a total of 140 head with 52 milking. Before our Knight Reel Auggie, feeding a TMR took us 1 1/2 hours twice a day. Now each feeding takes approximately 1/2 hour"

John and Harry Nooven
Brabantdale Farms - Narvan, Ontario, Canada

"We feed about 200 head per day with an average of 100 milking. We owned a 4-auger mixer before. Our Knight Reel Auggie has a shorter mixing time with a superior blended ration"

Wayne and Bradley Beidel
Beidel Brothers - Newbury, Pennsylvania

"We mix 5 loads per day to feed 650 head. Our Knight Reel Auggie mixes faster and unloads faster than the auger mixers that we previously owned. Drive through feeding with our tow model has cut our feeding time by two-thirds"

Warren and Dave Otto
Otto Farms - Valders, Wisconsin

Case IH 3950 Disk Harrow
IT LEVELS, LEVELS, LEVELS!

This special offer is good on Case IH Early Riser planters, grain drills, disk harrows, field cultivators and more

Tillage Practices Change.
A Seed's Requirements Do Not.

An Early Riser Planter Is "The Germinator"

Remember What's most important is the combination of planting to moisture, uniform depth control, seed-to-soil contact, uniform soil pressure accurate population and seed spacing

Early Riser planter makes a difference.

That means a one- to seven-day faster emergence, a 7 bu per acre average yield advantage in corn
That is real value.

And the "1465" can be ordered with a mechanical tongue shift or hydraulic tongue shift. Other great features include:

- A torsion-bar roll-pressure system
- Chevron-design rolls for thorough, gentle conditioning and fast drydown
- 100% bolted knife assemblies

When performance, reliability and durability count, you can count on the "1465".

NEW HOLLAND

TOUGHER THAN THE REST

The New Holland Model Lx565 Super Boom™ skid-steer loader is tougher, more durable and more reliable than ever.

The "Lx565" offers a 40 horsepower diesel engine with an SAE load rating of a powerful 1,500 pounds.

The Pick Up 'n Go™ universal attachment system makes it compatible with New Holland and competitive attachments. The strong boom design and massive loader pins make it more reliable.

And the quick engine access makes it easier to service.

See what makes the Super Boom so tough.

The new Landsman XT offers exclusive features that put it in a class by itself!

- 25" underframe clearance and 6 ranks of shanks provide outstanding residue clearance.
- Only Krause offers one rank of rugged XT 270 shanks up front to break up tough soils, followed by five ranks of heavy-duty 2-Piece K-Tines.
- Or, equip the Landsman XT with all six ranks of 2-Piece K-Tines, the ideal conservation tillage shank!
- Shank spacing choice of 9" or 7" to match your residue management needs.
- New High-Residue rear attachments include 3-row tine/reel and 3 row spike/reel combinations for a firm, level seedbed.

X-Tra tough describes the new XT 270 Shanks! With a 270 lb. point load, 10" trip height and 3/4" thick, edge formed design, these shanks rip through tough unworked soils. XT 270 shanks can be mounted ahead of the field cultivator shanks for serious minimum till work.

2-Piece K-Tine

Massive 1/2" x 3" upper leaf spring and an edge formed 5/8" thick lower shank provide a 180 lb point load measured at working depth. Compare that to the light 110-130 lb class shanks that equip most competitive models. Knowledgeable farmers recognize that Krause's edge-formed shanks greatly reduce shank marks, reduce draft and preserve more residue.

Quality Finishing Attachments

Krause's new High-Residue 3-Row Tine & Reel combination features 7/16" x 16" tines, with each row mounted and spring tensioned individually to allow residue to "walk" through without "bunching and dragging." This attachment can also be ordered without the finishing reel. Hi-Residue 3/Row spike/reel, 4-row tine and 5-row spike harrows also available.

PRODUCING HIGHER YIELDS BEGINS WITH THE PROPER GROUNDWORK

GLENCOE® SS7200/SS7400 SOIL SAVER®

For your primary tillage needs, nothing prepares your seedbed better than Glencoe SS7200 or SS7400 Soil Savers. These one-pass tillage tools feature a heavy-duty 6"x4" frame with the strength to stand up to high horsepower tractors and years of hard use.

Our adjustable spring-cushioned slicer gang is rock-shaft mounted for optimum bearing and blade protection. Choose heavy-duty rigid, spring cushion or AutoReset shanks with twisted shovels or sweeps to match your conservation requirements. For even more versatility, Soil Savers have working widths that range from 6 to 21 feet.

To get a closer look at the SS7200 and SS7400 Soil Savers, contact your Glencoe dealer today. Once you see how easy it is to build the optimum seedbed, you'll wonder why you didn't purchase a Soil Saver sooner.

Cover Crops Conference Set For Md. Ag Leaders

COLLEGE PARK, Md. - Cover crops during the winter months seems like a great idea for keeping farmland nutrients from leaching into the Chesapeake Bay. So why have agricultural producers been slow to adopt their use, as recommended in Maryland's tributary team plans?

Recent scientific research and field experience address many of the previous cover crop limitations. So the University of Maryland's College of Agriculture and Natural Resources has scheduled a two-day Cover Crops Conference to share these findings with agricultural, natural resource, and environmental professionals. The conference also will be of interest to public officials, farm and environmental groups, and farmers themselves.

The two-day event is scheduled March 18-19 in the Tidewater Inn at Easton. Support is being provided by the University of Maryland's Cooperative Extension Service, with supplementary financial support from the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Northeast Sustainable Agriculture Research and education (SARE) program.

Registration information is available from county offices of the university's cooperative extension service throughout Maryland, or call Barbara South at the university's Wye Research and Education Center near Queenstown, (410)827-6202. The registration deadline has been extended to March 11.

A $50 registration fee includes lunch on the first day and breakfast on the second day, plus morning coffee breaks and bus transportation for a field trip. The late and on-site registration fee is $70.

Activities on the first day get under way at 9 a.m. with check-in and a morning coffee hour. Program sessions will begin at 10 a.m. The afternoon agenda will include a field trip to the Wye Research and education Center to observe various species of cover crops with two planting dates and learn about ongoing cover crop research and demonstrations.

The second day begins with breakfast at 8 a.m. Program sessions will run from 9 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. Topics will include soil quality, cropping systems, pest interactions, alternative cover crop species, and farm management economics.

Farm Equipment Distributor Now 60 Years Old

EPHRATA (Lancaster Co.) - In 1938, Robert J. Hamilton saw a need for supplying local farm equipment dealers with the latest products manufactured by mid-western factories.

Moving from Pittsburgh, to Ephrata, PA in the summer of 1938, Bob Hamilton created Hamilton Equipment - a wholesale farm machinery distribution company.

During the years of World War II, rationing limited the products that could be manufactured for domestic use. Times were tough for Hamilton Equipment.

But the end of World War II brought prosperity and exciting growth. Bob Hamilton pioneered products such as Horn-Draulic Loaders, Champion Potato Diggers, King-Wyse Elevators, Danuser Post Hole Diggers, and Gorman-Rupp Irrigation Pumps.

In 1949, Hamilton Equipment moved from a leased tobacco barn to a 29,000 square foot facility on Pointview Avenue in Ephrata, PA. As sales increased during the 1950's, Hamilton Equipment's services expanded. A full time service shop was added to assist dealers. A fleet of trucks was purchased to reduce freight costs. A branch warehouse was opened in Charlottesville, Virginia to service dealers in Virginia and West Virginia.

As Hamilton Equipment continued to grow, the company moved in 1970 to a new building with 70,000 square foot of warehouse space. And, a new branch warehouse with 33,000 square foot was opened in Raphine, Virginia in 1977.

The product mix changed with customer requirements. As compact tractors increased in popularity, Hamilton Equipment introduced machines for week-end farmers and business contractors. Products such as estate mowers, landscape equipment, and snow removal equipment were added to the traditional farm equipment lines.

Today, Hamilton Equipment offers a diverse range of machinery from 5 horsepower walk-behind products to tillage equipment for 150+ horsepower tractors. Services include a fully stocked parts department, computer controlled inventory, service schools for dealer mechanics, demonstrations of new products, warranty processing, dealer financing, and regularly scheduled delivery to 1000+ dealer accounts in a six state area.

The future for Hamilton Equipment is bright. Rapidly changing advancements in agriculture will require new equipment to meet the needs of the 21st Century. Hamilton Equipment has been built on discovering, promoting, and delivering quality products to a changing market. The foundation has been laid for greater growth and success in the coming years.

In times past, field demonstrations gave farmers up-close review of equipment operation.

Gettysburg Rancher Elected Director

GETTYSBURG (Adams Co.)

— Tom Brown of Gettysburg was elected director of the Texas Longhorn Breeders Association of America (TLBAA) at its 33rd annual general membership meeting in Fort Worth, Texas.

The oldest and largest Texas Longhorn registry in the world, the TLBAA was organized in 1964. It has more than 4,200 members across the United States, Canada, and five foreign countries and maintains records on almost 250,000 animals at its office in Fort Worth, Texas.

Brown and his wife, Susie, operate Triple Ring Ranch, where they have raised Texas Longhorn cattle since 1991. The historic value of the breed appeals to the Browns, as well as the Texas Longhorn's ease of maintenance and production of naturally lean beef.

Belarus Offers New Tractor Options

MILWAUKEE, Wis. — With the highest horsepower offered in the utility tractor market at the most economical price, Belarus Machinery, Inc. offers two new features in their utility series tractors, allowing for more customized options.

"Belarus is pleased to announce new rear tire selections and an orchard style cab and fenders for both models 8011L and 9011L," said E.W. Muehlhausen, manager of operations and business development at Belarus. "These alternatives provide more operating flexibility in today's orchards, vineyards, lawn and landscape operations, and farm chore work."

Rear tires now come in 20-inch, 28-inch, and 30-inch dimensions to accommodate different workload needs. The optional orchard style cab increases operator comfort while air conditioning and tinted UV tempered windows help ensure maximum riding ease. Cab features include heavy fiberglass construction; a low-profile, narrow design; and front- and rear-opening windows, plus the orchard cab also can be mounted and removed for servicing. An additional light package includes interior lighting and four-way halogen exterior lighting. Cabs also can be equipped with fenders to protect orchard fruit from tire damage.

Models 8011L and 9011L offer the highest horsepower available in the specialty tractor market.

With an optional orchard cab and fenders, the 81-horsepower Belarus 8011L low-clearance tractor is versatile enough to handle multiple jobs. The cab and fenders also are available for the 98-horsepower model 9011L.

"Belarus designed the low-clearance tractor series with maximum horsepower in mind," said Muehlhausen. "The result is a utility tractor versatile enough to handle multiple jobs without sacrificing the power needed to get tough work done."

Model 8011L features a four-cylinder, 81-horsepower, water-cooled engine with a 72-horsepower PTO. The 9011L boasts a 98-horsepower, turbocharged engine offering a 90-horsepower PTO. Both models feature independent PTO speeds at 540/1,000 rpm and have a hydraulic pump output of 11.9 gpm. A Category II, 3-point hitch provides a lift capacity of 4,250 pounds.

Reasons Named President

DES MOINES, Iowa — D.L. (Dick) Reasons was named president and chief executive officer of Optimum Quality Grains, the joint venture between DuPont and Pioneer Hi-Bred International that was formed to speed the discovery, development, and delivery of new crops that benefit farmers, livestock producers, and consumers worldwide.

DuPont and Pioneer closed the deal in early January, in which DuPont invested $1.7 billion in Pioneer, owning 20 percent of its stock for $104 per share and acquiring two of the 15 seats on Pioneer's board of directors. Pioneer is using the proceeds to buy back its own stock.

Prior to being picked to head the Optimum Quality Grains joint venture, Reasons held positions with DuPont in sales, marketing,

Entomologists Get First Look At New Insecticide Compound

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — The first research data from tests with a novel, new insecticide compound were introduced by scientists from Novartis Crop Protection, Inc., at the Entomological Society of American Annual Meeting.

Six papers were presented indicating that the new compound shows promise for control of sucking and chewing insects in more than 20 crops, with low-use rates and minimal impact on beneficial insects.

Novartis has designated the compound as CGA 293'343, a novel, neonicotinoid class insecticide with a unique structure. Novartis indicated that a common name has not yet been approved by ISO-9000. The research presented today shows CGA 293'343 is active against aphids, Colorado potato beetle, leafhoppers, leafminers, scales, thrips and whiteflies. The compound has a unique mode of action interfering with specific nicotinic acetyl choline receptors through contact and ingestion.

The Novartis researchers reported results with CGA 293'343 in such crops as apples, citrus, cole crops, cotton, grapes, potatoes, tobacco and vegetables, at rates ranging from 0.2 to 2.0 ounces of active ingredient per acre. For example, in a recent field trial conducted in Arlington, Wis., treatments of CGA 293'343 were applied in-furrow to control the Colorado potato beetle. CGA 293'343, applied at 1.0 and 1.5 grams of active ingredient per 100 meters (6.0 to 9.0 ounces of a 2SC formulation), provided almost 100 percent control of the target pest.

Data were also presented showing that CGA 293'343 is effective in a variety of applications, including seed treatment, in-furrow and as a foliar spray.

"Growers around the world tell us they need effective, targeted insect control products that fit integrated pest management strategies," said Dr. Hans Elmsheuser, director, product management, insecticides, Novartis Crop Protection in Basle, Switzerland. "To meet that need, Novartis Crop Protection is committed to developing compounds like CGA 293'343 through the best combination of biological technology and traditional chemical research."

New Holland Completes Acquisition of Flexi-Coil

NEW HOLLAND (Lancaster Co.) — New Holland N.V. (NYSE:NH), one of the world's leading producers of agricultural and construction equipment, announced the completion of an agreement to acquire a 35 percent interest in Flexi-Coil, the Canadian manufacturer of seeding systems and tillage equipment. Under the agreement, New Holland will acquire the majority interest in Flexi-Coil over time. Terry Summach will remain president of Flexi-Coil and head of operations. Other terms of the agreement were not disclosed.

New Holland Chief Executive Officer Umberto Quadrino described New Holland's expectations for the new acquisition: "In the near term, Flexi-Coil will be a significant contributor to our top line growth as New Holland's worldwide distribution system opens up new market opportunities for this outstanding product line almost immediately. And synergies between our existing line of high horsepower New Holland tractors and Flexi-Coil's comprehensive line of air seeding systems should result in increased sales for both product lines.

"We anticipate that Flexi-Coil will continue to distribute its product line under the well-known Flexi-Coil brand name. In addition, we expect to begin distribution through selected New Holland dealers and distributors in 1998."

Agent One Of Three Honored

CLAYTON, N.J. - Jerry Frecon, agricultural agent with Rutgers Cooperative Extension of Gloucester County, recently received the Agribusiness Man of the Year Award from the New Jersey Agribusiness Association.

Frecon was honored for his educational programs on agricultural chemicals used in agriculture. Frecon was presented the awards at the annual meeting of the 240 member New Jersey Agribusiness Association in December at the Holiday Inn in Swedesboro.

Presenting a plaque and presenting Frecon a citation was Richard Grant, president of the association. Grant said Jerry Frecon has been a proactive force in educating the public and others on agricultural use and safety. He has spoken frequently and written and lectured regularly on the importance of agricultural use in agricultural production.

In addition to his educational activities, Frecon has served the association as an officer, director, and chair of numerous committees, including long-time editor of the association's newsletter.

Dr. Louis Vasvary, former extension specialist in entomology with Rutgers Cooperative Extension, was also presented the New Jersey Agribusiness Association's Heritage Award for his long-time service and educational efforts. Vasvary was recognized for his years of chairing and organizing the Rutgers Pest Control Conference and for his many publications on pest control and pesticide application. Vasvary was an educator in pesticide use for almost 33 years.

The New Jersey Agribusiness Associations' Business of the Year Award was awarded to the Tri-County Cooperative Association and its manager, Ed Ciaccio. Tri-County offers a wide variety of services and supplies to gardeners, homeowners, farmers, and horticultural businesses in central and southern New Jersey.

• Insecticide tank wick feeds automatically, no valves, jets or pumps to clog.
• Mineral feeder
• 1 to 4 applicators per unit.
• TOX-O-WIK Insecticide is the only insecticide recommended for TOX-O-WIK Cattle Oilers.
• Dairy units also available.

"ATTENTION DAIRYMEN"

Sprung Farms of Bergen, NY and J. Elvin Glick of Quarryville, PA have been supplying area dairymen with high quality forages for years, so we would like to introduce a new type of service, "Alfalfa Balage" "Alfalfa Balage" has been around for a time now and has proven to make a great source of feed providing that the farmer gets what he pays for. To help resolve this problem we would like to introduce an "on your farm service" which would include fresh baled alfalfa in easy to use 4' or 5' round bales. 1. Delivered immediately after baling, unwrapped for total inspection of quality and pureness of product, 2. After total satisfaction has been determined, a wrapping service by one of our local area farmers would take place at any site desired by buyer, 3. We can also offer two kinds of wrapping service, either single bale, individually or tube type by state of the art new wrappers.

Because we are so sure that our product and service is second to none, we can also offer a term type payment schedule with no interest to help spread out purchase to help with cash flow. If this offer interests you please call us to talk more about this and possibly we can arrange a personal meeting.

We also still carry our full line of small square bales of hay:

1. Alfalfa
2. Timothy/Alfalfa
3. Bedding
4. Western Hay

We also have single bale individually wrapped balage available. Any size load is available.

PURINA PROFILE

Small Herds Too!

No herd is too large or small to receive attention and individualized feeding programs from Purina. Take these three Amish farms in Lancaster County. You could call them small farms in size, but certainly not small in production from their cows that are fed with Purina's feeds and feeding programs.

All three farms are on DHIA, all have a Gordonville address in Lancaster County, and all are within the High Bros. mill market area. Even more important, all three herds have increased their production significantly since they were featured in this ad seven months ago on June 7, 1997.

At Double L Farm, 45 Holsteins average 25,073m

J. Richard Kolb, Purina Dairy Specialist, seated, and Douglas High, from High Bros., check DHIA records of their Amish customers.

That's up 3,352m since the June ad report. They feed Purina's Proteus and Super EXT. Many cows exceed 100 pounds of milk per day, and the most recent daily herd average is 82.1 pounds.

The Amishman said Proteus feeds are good for the environment and our soils. "I was excited to hear from Purina's Research Farm that urinary nitrogen is reduced 20 to 30 percent."

Up the road at King Ridge Farm 56 homebred Registered Holsteins have a rolling herd average of 24,468m. That's up 2,313 pounds from the June ad report. Their latest daily herd average is 85.3 pounds. The feeding ration is built around flake feed and Super EXT topdress. King Ridge is a long time customer and says Purina feeds perform well. "Cows keep good body condition and peak higher on Purina," the Amishman said. "I can keep the peak production longer, too."

And across the fields is Abe-Mar farm. This Amish farmer said he switched to Purina because "I wanted more milk." And he got it. The latest rolling herd average is 20,406m. In less than one year, the average cow at Abe-Mar is peaking 12 pounds higher on the average. The higher energy feeding program is built around Proteus and Super EXT.

All three Amish Dairy farmers have the same story. Cows peak higher and stay at top production longer with Purina Feeds. In addition, the cows keep good body condition even while they produce large quantities of milk.

These cows are milking over 100 pounds per day to a top of 148.3 pounds at Double L. farm.

These cows enjoy Purina feeds at Abe-Mar farm.

Soil Organic Contents High — So Are Yields On Chester County Corn Grower's Farm

ANDY ANDREWS

REINHOLDS (Lancaster Co.) — Crop specialists have known for years that impressive corn yields are possible by rotating to corn from a sod or legume.

But one master corn grower looks deeper, and possibly struck gold — in a way — by paying attention to improving soil organic content.

When other fields endured yet another droughty season in 1997, Reinholds-area corn grower Jeff Mitchell took a look at one plot — plot number 2, in his records — on previous soybean ground in West White-land Township in Chester County which he manages. The plot's soil is Hagerstown loam with a pH of 6.6.

That's not so impressive. But what does stand out is the soil format according to tests conducted recently by a private company.

That plot's soil tested high for organic matter (4.7 percent) with an 11.8 CEC (or "cation exchange capacity," the ability of the soil to hold nutrients for the plant's use). The plot was located near a PennDOT wetlands restoration project. Having an estimated nitrogen release (ENR) of 127 pounds per acre also helps. (ENR refers to the amount of nitrogen expected to be released from the available organic matter in the soil.)

The soil test showed high to very high levels of phosphorous and potassium with a medium-level amount of calcium and other nutrients. Mitchell conducts no nitrogen

Maximum Yield Goals Require Vigilance

GRANTVILLE (Dauphin Co.) — Think of this: 328 bushels per acre of corn.

To some growers, this could be simply an after-supper dream as they gaze upon the entry form for the multi-acre corn club contest.

But at Rutgers University, this dream already came true — years ago.

In 1991, using what can only be described as "vigilance" and by blending various hybrids, Dr. Joseph Heckman, Rutgers University extension specialist, achieved just that as part of an ongoing "maximum yield research" program at the university.

The goals of the project: identify yield factors and use methodologies to overcome limitations of the soil, the seed, and the crops themselves.

Heckman spoke to about 200 producers and agri-industry representatives recently at the Pennsylvania Corn and Soybean conference at the Holiday Inn in Grantville.

Of course, the project didn't concern itself with the "economic or practical aspects" of growing a top crop, Heckman noted. The project simply looked for ways to increase yield.

testing on the soil. Also, no manure is applied.

With high organic content, good CEC, and impressive ENR, the soil was able to hold moisture, despite the drought.

Mitchell was recently honored as the champion of the 3-year average awards, shelled corn regular harvest size from a plot that garnered 206 bushels per acre in 1997. Average yield for three years was 197.5 bushels per acre.

Mitchell received his 5-Acre Corn Club Contest Award at the Pennsylvania Corn and Soybean Conference recently at the Holiday Inn in Grantville.

Mitchell, who grew up in Lionville, owns a 90-acre farm near Reinholds, Lancaster County. At the home farm last year he grew 45 acres of corn and some hay. This year he plans to grow 35 acres of corn and 17 acres of wheat.

With additional leased land in Chester County, altogether Mitchell hopes to care for about 700 acres of corn. "We used to do more than that in Chester County," he said. "But the land is lost to building and development."

All told, Mitchell cares for about 520 acres of corn, 260 acres of soybeans, 75 acres of wheat, 25 in alfalfa hay mixes, and 18 acres of barley. A large part of the corn land is in the Exton area.

In Reinholds, Mitchell manages about 66,000 chickens in two houses under contract for Pennfield. Mitchell and his wife Susie care for about five flocks per year. The Lancaster County growers also finished about 150 hogs last fall for Hatfield. He also maintains a small stock of finishing beef.

On the 5-acre contest plot, part of land owned by the Church Farm School — a single-parent boys boarding school from sixth through 12th grade — Mitchell follows a two-year corn program with soybeans.

Using no-till, Mitchell planted the Pioneer 3335 variety at a planting depth of 1½ inches on May 2, 1997 at a row width of 30 inches, for a final plant population of 25,265 per acre. He used a starter fertilizer of 250 pounds of 10-34-0 fertilizer.

No sidedress was applied. Herbicide applied was a Roundup/Broadstrike combination in a nitrogen solution. There was no cultivation at sidedress.

Mitchell saw little economic advantages to using insecticides because little or no European corn borer or corn rootworm was evident. The most difficult weed to deal with in the area, Mitchell noted, is burcucumber, which is a "real nasty weed to control," said Mitchell. However, the weed can be handled by herbicides when the

END OF THE TUNNEL

FOR DAIRYMEN

Last year Ervin Hostetler, Belleville, PA fed FULL-TIME™ Forage and was pleased with the 9.5 lb. increase in milk production he received. He compared FullTime™ Forage to 7301FQ as part of Cargill's on farm feed trials. This year he is even more convinced FullTime™ Forage is the wave of the future for dairymen.

Currently, Ervin is getting 86.5 lbs. of milk and making $9.00 income over feed costs/cow/day. His ration on an as fee basis consists of:

75 lbs.	FullTime™ Forage
20 lbs.	Balage
12 lbs.	High Moisture Corn
8.5 lbs.	Protein
1.25 lbs.	Minerals
.3 lbs.	ByPass Fat

But there is a lot more to his story. On November 17, 1997 his cows were milking 57 lbs. He was out of corn silage and was getting ready to move to his new barn and milking parlor on a different farm. After the move, the cows dropped to 49 lbs. The cows were started out at 50 lbs. FullTime™ Forage and gradually moved to 75 lbs. FullTime™ Forage. On December 24, the cows were producing 72 lbs/cow/day. On December 26 Ervin started milking 3 times a day. One week later, they were at 86.5 lbs./day.

Will Ervin be planting more FullTime™ Forage in 1998? ABSOLUTELY!

He and his Young's nutritionist, Dave Martin are doing their own research project. How much forage can these cows eat utilizing FullTime™ Forage in the ration and what effect will this have on feed cost savings, milk production and income over feed costs?

Ervin already sees FULLTIME™ as the light at the end of the tunnel for dairymen, but could it even get better?

FEED TRIAL UPDATE

The research project on Ervin's herd has concluded and the results are exciting! Twenty-six cows that were 250 days in milk were fed 108 lbs. of FULLTIME™ Forage and no high moisture corn. That group increased 2.1 lbs. of milk and income over feed costs was $8.39.

However, group 2 was the real winner. At 215 days in milk they increased 10.9 lbs. and are producing 99.5 lbs. Income over feed costs is $10.24. These cows were kept on the original ration. The whole herd averaged 89.9 lbs/milk at $9.42 income over feed costs.

So what does Ervin plan on doing next year? He is going to plant enough FULLTIME™ Forage to feed his cows 90 lbs. of FULLTIME™ Forage all year.

FULLTIME™ Forage is the light at the end of the tunnel for dairymen! Don't wait any longer Plant FULLTIME™ Forage this spring and reap the benefits all next year!

For many of his Chester County fields, there was also some shattercane, but below economic threshold levels.

Most growers saw their season saved by a mid-July rainstorm, which provided welcome relief from a persistent drought most of the summer. "That was a million-dollar rain, with some additional numbers in front of it," Mitchell said. The rain came at the time of corn pollination, saving the corn harvest season for lots of growers.

Corn in the Reinholds area was helped along dramatically, according to Mitchell, by a 3.5-inch rainfall on June 19.

Machine harvest was conducted late in October at a grain moisture of 28 percent. Much of the grain went to Lancaster County mills.

Mitchell attributes the high organic matter in the soil to the use of high levels of a cover crop that was tilled into the soil as green manure. That was a practice followed by Jeff's father, Walter Mitchell, who farmed in Chester County in the early 1950s until retirement.

Walter was a "real believer in cover crops," and would chew up the cover crops and incorporate the "green manure," adding more moisture-retention ability to the soil.

The award-winning plot, once a pasture for a number of years, gradually saw an increase in organic matter, essential for high corn yields.

What is amazing, according to Mitchell, is how two similar fields can yield different results.

Mitchell pointed out, according to the lab soil test, how field 7 compares to the award-winning field 2. Field 7 has similar readings, except for the organic content. And that field only yielded 90 bushels per acre, compared to 206 for the winning plot.

A challenge Mitchell faces is taking the "red clay" soils of northeastern Lancaster County, that can often turn hardpan easily in a hot, dry summer, and make them top producers.

The key is to continue to use cover crops and building the soil's organic matter content, which goes a long way toward water absorption. Using no-till on the red clay soils is a challenge, also — Mitchell believes that they turn easily to hardpan and may require some tillage to break them up to allow moisture penetration and avoid runoff.

On the red clay soils of Reinholds, Mitchell harvests an average of 158 bushels per acre of corn.

"I was pleased with the yield," said Mitchell. He plans to use chicken manure and cover crops in the rotation to raise the production level of the corn crops. He also uses a lot of different corn varieties with varying maturity dates to spread the risk during unpredictable growing years.

Increasingly, Mitchell is slowly watching challenges for

MHS Student Takes Top Honors In Corn-Growing Contest

HERSHEY (Dauphin Co.) — Milton Hershey School (MHS) Student Solomon Melson received first place honors in a corn-growing contest sponsored by The Pennsylvania Master Corn Growers Association.

Solomon, a senior, yielded the most corn per acre in Dauphin County, totaling 188.42 bushels. His yield ranked 10th for the state of Pennsylvania.

Each contestant registered five acres of corn. During harvest, judges observed and measured the yield of each parcel.

Solomon, who competed largely with professional farmers, maintained 10 MHS acres of corn as part of a summer internship in the School's Agricultural and Environmental Education Program. In addition to caring for the field, Solomon researched ways in which he could produce optimal growth, including pest management and use of fertilizers.

Solomon will receive a plaque for his efforts.

growing good crops in Chester County slip away. A great deal of prime farmland has been lost to development.

Now, he is content to meet the same challenges of farming in northeastern Lancaster County.

Of note is the attention to detail he has noticed growers use on reading the results of the 5-Acre Corn Club contest, of which the results are included in this issue of Corn Talk.

"Some growers take it very seriously," he noted. "I look at it and learn some things." Mitchell pointed out one interesting item — the trips across the field.

Some growers had six, seven, even eight trips across the field. With even a few trips, Mitchell worries about compaction, and uses deep tillage equipment. He noted one chart which indicated a couple of growers took 14 trips across the field.

"What can they possibly be doing, taking 14 trips across the field?" Mitchell said with a laugh.

Survey Documents Crop Rotation Practices

Greg Roth
Penn State Agronomy
Associate Professor

Many dairy farmers grow corn and alfalfa in rotation. There are many variations on the standard corn alfalfa rotations, however.

The length of rotation can vary, some farmers double-crop corn following alfalfa, and some include nurse crops such as oats or triticale in a corn/alfalfa rotation. We are interested in determining the potential for shorter corn/alfalfa rotations. This would help to reduce some of the problems associated with corn grown in long rotations.

Recently we conducted a survey of 153 dairy producers who manage a total of 38,000 acres of crops in Franklin and Lycoming counties. Our objective was to study crop rotation practices of producers in the counties.

Our study showed that a surprising number of growers were using rotations that included three years or less of corn. Thirty-nine percent of the growers surveyed indicated they used a 3-year corn/3-year alfalfa rotation of some kind. We also asked the producers what factors they consider in rotating alfalfa back to corn: 91 percent indicated they considered stand density, 40 percent considered stand age, and 23 percent said they considered feed needs. So most growers are making the decision to rotate based on the density of their alfalfa stands.

We also found that double-cropping corn after alfalfa is also relatively popular. About 41 percent of the producers in Franklin County reported that they double-crop corn after alfalfa most of the time. In Lycoming County, where the season is a bit shorter, 24 percent reported double-cropping corn after alfalfa most of the time.

Alfalfa management practices also vary among producers. Nurse crops such as oats, field peas, or triticale are popular in these areas, with 68 percent of the Lycoming respondents and 31 percent of the Franklin County producers reporting the use of a nurse crop. The use of no-till alfalfa also varied among the counties with 18 percent of the Franklin county dairy producers reporting that they used no-till most of the time. In contrast, none of the Lycoming County respondents reported using no-till most of the time.

CORN TALK NEWS

PENNSYLVANIA MASTER CORN GROWERS ASSOC., INC.

One factor that is critical in considering shorter rotations is the number of cuttings of alfalfa you harvest in the seeding year. In Franklin County, 75 percent of the producers reported harvesting three (61 percent) or four (14 percent) times in the seeding year. In Lycoming County, only 33 percent reported harvesting three (30 percent) or four (3 percent) times in the seeding year.

Our study demonstrates that crop production practices vary somewhat between the two counties and that there does seem to be potential for short rotations in both areas.

A significant number of producers are already using relatively short rotations. This study also indicated several barriers to adopting shorter rotations — low use of no-till alfalfa, cost of reseeding alfalfa, and only one or two seeding year harvests in some areas.

Understanding these factors will help us target our research programs for the future.

- 12 babies are given to the wrong parents each day.

The PMCGA board is looking into ways to get some current research done by working with extension, chemical, and seed companies. If you have ideas on some research projects that you believe would be important to Pennsylvania corn growers, let one of your local directors know or myself. Contact me at Chris Kimmel, R.D. #2 Box 155, Shelocta, PA 15774, (724) 354-2568.

For the western Pennsylvania corn growers, we are in the process of planning a workshop for next December in the Mercer area. If there are subjects that you would like to see covered, or if you know of a good speaker, please let us know. The regular Pennsylvania Corn/Soybean Conference will still be held next year around February.

If you are a corn producer in Pennsylvania and have not yet joined the PMCGA and want to help support your industry, now would be a good time. You will still get a free bag of seed corn with your three-year membership for $75.

This will also give you a membership in the National Corn Growers Association. You need to support the industry that you depend on for part of your livelihood! Don't make other people pay your way!

The project, conducted at the Rutgers Crops Research and Development Center in Adelphia, examined the combination of genetics and the environment, including hybrid selection, soil fertility, irrigation, and other factors, to see what kind of yields would result.

A "combination of hybrids and blend and cross-pollination, if matched well, can boost yields 2.7 percent," Heckman noted.

Irrigation was a big factor to ensure the leading root system did not contact dry soil.

Some key findings for growers as a result of the project:

- Plant early for "maximum harvest of sunlight," noted Heckman. When planting early, the crop's canopy results in early closure and soil is not exposed, bare, to sunlight.
- Use starter MAP at a rate of 11-52-0.
- Use equal plant spacing.
- Use optimal seed depth, from 1½ to 2 inches deep.
- Plant corn on 12-inch rows at 90,000 seeds to the acre. Thin out to one plant to every square foot.
- Ensure good soil preparation, proper pH, subsoil, and ensure that the subsoil is not acidic.

Crop rotations into forage legumes, sod, or soybeans can improve yields. Research studies have shown that corn after corn with no rotation suppresses yields by 10 percent.

Adding organic material through manure and compost can also improve the quality of soil.

A big limitation to overall yield is sunlight. "Sunlight is one of the most difficult limitations to overcome," Heckman noted.

The project followed the groundbreaking studies by Dr. Roy Flannery from the 1980s. In 1980, Flannery achieved yields of 312 bushels per acre.

In Flannery's studies, crops were given nitrogen at 500 pounds per acre, phosphorous at 300 pounds per acre, and potash at 300 pounds per acre, including micronutrients. Heckman followed Flannery's program, to a certain degree. However, Heckman modified the nitrogen material to 400-500 pounds per acre using ammonium sulfate, used 100 pounds of phosphorous per acre, and 400 pounds of potassium per acre. He also used about 200-300 pounds of sulphur and other nutrients.

Heckman used a combination of Pioneer hybrids to achieve the results. Planting dates went from April 24 to May 1 at a seeding rate of 90,000 plants per acre, thinned to 43,560 plants per acre in one square foot blocks per plant. About 60-80 percent of the field crop was irrigated two to three times a week during the season. "Never allow the soil to dry out," said Heckman.

Using potassium chloride (0-0-60 is an excellent source, noted Heckman) also helped achieve higher yields. Also, boron applications improved fertility and pollination.

NEW! John Deere Exclusive

Only two moving parts - Innovative radial bean meter is simple, accurate and economical

Replacing your planter's soybean meter? Wait! Check out this exclusive new Radial Bean Meter (RBM) for John Deere Kinze Great Plains and New Idea Planters. It offers much more than conventional feedcup meters: more simplicity, more accuracy, more working life and it's more economical.

There are just two moving parts: a seed bowl that picks up single soybeans and a knockout wheel that pops oversized or incorrectly seated beans back into the reservoir. It's the operating simplicity of these two moving parts that makes this meter last up to three times longer than current volume type meters. And minimal wear of the two moving parts means greater seeding accuracy over the meter's life.

Simple, accurate and economical with an extremely long wear life. That's value. But there's more! This revolutionary new Radial Bean Meter is actually priced below brush-type meters. See us - and you'll see the savings.

Growing Season Review

In fact, there was a time, as he was driving up Rt. 81 through the Virginia Shenandoah Valley in the summer last year, when one agronomist "wondered whether the weather was going to give us a crop at all," said Mark Mattingly, agronomist with Hoffman Seeds.

Mattingly provided an overview of the past growing year to about 200 growers and agri-industry representatives who attended the 1998 Pennsylvania Corn and Soybean Conference recently at the Holiday Inn in Grantville.

The last corn growing season was "not hot, not a season of high growing degree units, not a high-moisture year, but a low-disease pressure year because of low foliage," said Mattingly.

Some pests were predominant in other agronomic crops in a year that some growers have decided was nothing but finicky, when it came to the weather. Alfalfa had historically high levels of potato leafhopper, soybean fields were infested with spider mite, and European corn borer was a predominant insect that attacked corn.

A combination of a dry growing year, with an emergent season that was anything but normal, according to the agronomist, and insect pressure created "stress on stress" conditions for corn.

"Everything we can do to reduce stress can bring about a healthier plant and a healthier life for the plant," Mattingly noted.

What made the particular growing season so challenging was the on-again, off-again personality to the weather.

Because of the cool, wet spring, planting season began late for many growers. This affected some crops drastically. As a result of the continued wet, cool conditions in the spring, corn stayed in the ground long after it should have emerged. And the longer the corn remains in the ground, the greater chance fungus and insects can destroy it.

Also, wet weather plagued harvest of the crop well into the end of last year. Some test plots in New York State didn't see results until February.

Mattingly offered tips for growers to plan for "agronomic consequences" of an unpredictable season:

- Use well-tuned and calibrated equipment. Seed and herbicide placement need to be precise.

- Ensure there are alternative planting dates, labeled Plan B or Plan C, with different varieties, to work with the different weather patterns that can affect crops.

- Residue management is critical. Remove the trash from the field to ensure seed emergence. Too much trash can keep the fields too cool, working against seed emergence.

- Hybrid and variety selection are critical. Use readily adaptable varieties. Some varieties can be more tolerable to gray leaf spot. Luckily, the mid-season droughts in the area and dry conditions throughout the region kept the fungus at bay.

- Planting depth is critical in corn. Growers can end up placing the seed either too deep or too shallow. If corn is planted at 1-inch depth or less, secondary root systems can develop on the surface, easily affected by the stresses of dry conditions or herbicide interaction.

- Timely weed control. It's always a "constant" in the business, Mattingly noted.

The agronomist reviewed the various types of technologies to deal with corn borer, including Bt hybrids and Bt hybrids with IMI tolerance.

Growers Take Home Awards At Conference

ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff
GRANTVILLE (Dauphin Co.) — For corn growers, last season was best described as a "rough season in all areas," according to Greg Roth, Penn State corn specialist.

Roth spoke about the growing year before presenting the annual Five-Acre Corn Club Contest awards recently at the Pennsylvania Corn and Soybean Conference at the Grantville Holiday Inn.

Corn winners from the 5-Acre Corn Club contest are:

- First place, shelled grain class, three-year average award, regular harvest size, Jeff Mitchell, Reinholds, for an average of 197.5 bushels per acre using Pioneer 3293 and Pioneer 3335.

- Second place went to Matthew Maximuck, Doylestown, for an average of 191.5

bushels. Maximuck used Dekalb 623 and Dekalb 618.

- Third place went to Larry E. Moyer, Mertztown, for an average of 187.4 bushels using Doeblers 82XP and Pioneer 3335.

In the 3 acre plus harvest size:

- First place went to Clarence A. Keener, Jr., Manheim, for an average of 210.5 bushels using Pioneer 3394 and Pioneer 3335.

- Second went to Floyd Kurtz, Fleetwood, for an average of 194.5 bushels using Pioneer 3335 and Pioneer 3260.

- Third place went to Lee Spangler, Mifflinburg, for an average of 189.8 bushels using Pioneer 3293, Pioneer 3394, and Pioneer 3335.

In the ear corn class, three-year average awards, regular harvest size:

- First went to David Schantz, Alburtis, for an average of 197.4 bushels using Pioneer 3394 and Pioneer 33Y09.

Second and third place winners in the 5-Acre Corn Club Contest. From left, Joseph Albright, 1997 winner, second place, ear corn class, hand harvest; James Hershey, 1997 champion third place, shelled grain class, 3-acre plus harvest size; and Lee Spangler, second place, 1997 champion, shelled grain, 3-acre plus harvest size.

- Second went to Kenneth L. Schlegel, Fleetwood, for an average of 180.5 bushels using Pioneer 3163, Pioneer 3335, and Pioneer 32K61.

- Third place went to Lester Poust, Muncy, for an average of 174 bushels per acre using Pioneer 3527 and Pioneer 3437.

For the 1997 one-year harvests, shelled grain, regular harvest size:

- First place went to Lloyd Zook, Oley, for a yield of 212.3 bushels per acre using Pioneer 3394 at a population of 19,624.

- Second place went to Joseph Matejik, Mechanicsville, for 211.9 bushels per acre using Hytest HT 4612 at a population of 31,029.

- Third place went to Jeff Mitchell, Reinholds, for 206 bushels per acre using Pioneer 3335 at a population of 25,265.

In the shelled grain, three-acre plus harvest size:

- First place went to Stanley and Richard Crone, Danville, for 213.3 bushels per acre using NK 7639Bt at a population of 29,155.

- Second place went to Lee Spangler, Mifflinburg, for 208.5 bushels per acre using Pioneer 3335 at a population of 25,287.

- Third place went to James

Maximum Yield

One of the most significant traits developed for corn plants has been Bt corn, which protects plant yield potential, noted Mattingly. Stalk rot from corn borer damage critically affects yield. By reducing corn borer feeding, the "plumbing system" that is the stalk can feed a healthier plant during the growing season.

"We can't change the weather, but we can make agronomic choices to reduce the consequences of the weather," said Mattingly.

Also at the conference, Dr. H. Louis Moore, Penn State professor of ag economics, provided an overview of grain industry trends for 1998, with figures that appeared in previous issues of Lancaster Farming.

Planning your crop program for the 1998 season involves many important decisions: hybrid selection, balanced soil fertility, effective herbicide programs, insecticides . . . and the list goes on.

A key ingredient to the success of this program is your crop rotation, the backbone of any feed or grain production system. With tight financial margins and expanding dairy operations on limited acreage, maximizing the profitability and production of your cropping system is essential. For dairy farmers, careful attention must be given to the crop mix to insure that forage production matches the feed needs of the herd, forage inventory on hand, and storage capabilities.

This may be particularly important if you experienced a shortfall of forages because of the drought conditions in 1997. A mismatch of your feed needs and crop production capabilities can cause a shortfall of one forage at a certain time of the year. Running out is expensive!

A good starting point is to evaluate alfalfa stands soon after green-up in early spring and determine if they are likely to be profitable for another year. Alfalfa fields in the third or fourth year of production with less than 4 to 5 plants per square foot are likely candidates for rotation. These fields can be spring-killed and planted to full-season corn or, if conditions permit, double-cropped after first cutting haylage.

If stands are really thin or the perspective field is prone to drought, don't risk double-cropping corn after first cutting. The hay yield may be too low or the yield penalty on your corn crop following hay may be too great.

Dairy farms that are able to produce adequate amounts of forage and have additional acres in continuous corn for grain may want to consider adding soybeans to their rotation. Substituting soybeans for corn in the later years of rotation can reduce inputs, help control perennial weeds, and improve the drought tolerance and yield stability of the crop system.

However, for dairy farms where acreage is limited and forage production must be emphasized, a shorter, 3-year corn/alfalfa rotation can provide some of these same benefits while generating large amounts of high quality forage.

The key to making a successful rotation profitable is taking advantage of all rotational credits to reduce input costs and recognizing the yield impact of rotational effect. Corn following a legume, either alfalfa or soybeans, will often outyield continuous corn by 15 percent to 20 percent under average conditions, and potentially much more under drought conditions.

CORN TALK NEWS

PENNSYLVANIA MASTER CORN GROWERS ASSOC., INC.

A crop rotation with a large proportion of corn in the first year of production has a high level of drought tolerance.

Planning a successful crop rotation is not easy. It takes time and attention to detail, both for this year's production and upcoming years. First you must assess the feed needs of your livestock operation and the production capabilities of your soil. Next, determine your current cost of production (for each crop) and actual crop yields. Then, match crops to soil capability, emphasizing forage production. Finally, take advantage of all rotational credits to reduce inputs in your crop program.

The profits of diversifying your rotation may not be in the soybean crop you add, but in the benefits it will bring the entire crop system. Recognizing and taking advantage of these benefits can truly pay off!

Study Examines Effects Of Processing Corn Silage

Larry Hoover
Department Of Ag And Biological Engineering
Penn State

Studies have shown the need for a limited amount of effective fiber in the rations of lactating dairy cows being fed total mixed rations.

Mechanical silage processing using roller mills has been hailed as a means to achieve more physically effective fiber with all silage diets, and many farmers have begun to incorporate corn silage processing into their forage feeding systems.

Corn silage processing has been marketed for its ability to reduce or eliminate undamaged corn kernels and achieve more physically effective fiber in corn silage. While this is true, little is known about the effects of mechanical processing on silage particle size distribution for different theoretical lengths of cut (TLC).

How long should silage be chopped if it will be processed before entering the silo? Does it matter? How does processing and TLC affect silage compaction?

In an effort to answer these questions, a recent study at Penn State was conducted to determine the interactions between mechanical processing and length of cut on particle size distribution and compaction of corn silage. Corn silage at 70 percent and 57 percent whole plant moisture and cut at 0.75-, 1.5-, and 2.25-inch theoretical lengths of cut (TLC) was used in the study. The corn silage was processed in a roller mill with the rolls set at minimum clearance — 0.015 inch.

One significant finding of the research showed that processing silage with the rolls set at minimum clearance totally eliminated undamaged kernels and large pieces of cob in the silage regardless of TLC and moisture content. We also found that as TLC increased, the effective fiber of the processed silage increased, regardless of moisture content.

When we evaluated the particle sizes of the silages, we found the amount of fine material in the processed silage was similar, regardless of TLC and moisture content. In other words, there was not more fine material (<0.22 inch) in the processed 0.75-inch TLC when compared to the processed 2.25-inch TLC.

Our study also showed that the compacted densities of the processed silage were similar regardless of chop length.

The decision concerning how long to chop corn silage must first be based on the type of storage system being used on the farm. There are practical limits to the lengths of cut used in upright silos because of silage compaction and consolidation within the silo as well as compatibility with blowers and silo unloaders.

Bunker silos can more easily accommodate longer lengths of cut since blower and unloader compatibilities no longer apply and compaction is accomplished by physically driving over the silage with a tractor. Chopping fine requires more power than chopping at a longer TLC, and processing also takes a significant amount of power. Therefore, chopping at a short TLC as well as processing will require more power than processing and chopping at longer TLC.

In light of the findings in this study, farmers who are processing corn silage chopped at less than 0.75 inch are using more power than necessary and not capitalizing on the full potential silage processing provides in regards to increased effective fiber. According to this study, the longest TLC that is compatible with the farmer's feeding system is best.

Silage compaction is important due to its impact on silage quality. To produce quality silage, the silage must ferment in an oxygen-free environment, and compaction is an important means of excluding oxygen from silage and prohibiting oxygen infiltration during storage. The results of this study suggest that the densities of processed silage, regardless of TLC, were similar, suggesting that, if compacted properly, 2.25-inch TLC processed silage should compact as well as 0.75 TLC silage, producing similar quality silage in the end.

On the other hand, the densities of the unprocessed silage did vary significantly with

TLC. Silage chopped at 2.25-inch TLC did not pack as well as silage chopped at 0.75-inch TLC, meaning that less oxygen was excluded from the 2.25-inch TLC, resulting in lower quality silage.

In conclusion, kernel processing becomes increasingly beneficial as the silage TLC is increased. In order to maximize the potential of silage processing, silage should be chopped at the largest TLC that is compatible with the feeding system. In so doing, producers will obtain the benefits of longer fiber particles in his silage without sacrificing forage quality due to poor packing in the silo.

State 5-Acre Contest Announces Awards

The severe drought conditions in some areas reduced the number of entries as well as the yields in the 1997 club. The entries were reduced to 95, down from 114 last year. The average grain yield in this years club was 165 bushels/acre down from 174 bushels/acre last year. Despite the drought conditions in many areas, some very high yields were achieved by some entrants. The yields in this years program are a testament to the stress tolerance of many of the hybrids being grown. Plant populations were off slightly from last year, probably due in part to the very cool May weather.

We also saw an increased use of Bt hybrids in the club indicating this technology is working in Pennsylvania. Other management practices were similar to previous years: planting depth averaged 1.7 inches, about 50% of the fields were sidedressed, starter fertilizer rates averaged about 170 pounds per acre and non-manure N applications averaged 116 pounds per acre across all fields.

Take a few minutes this year and review the crop management programs of the champions. I think you'll find that they are doing a textbook job of managing their crops and this is part of the reason they are being successful. Also, review the cultural practice summary and you will see the trends in inputs and cultural practices that corn club members are using.

Thanks to everyone who contributed to this effort: producers, extension agents, grain buyers, and seedsmen.

Lebanon Extra Plant Food

For over 50 years, farmers have been choosing Lebanon Extra for premium homogeneous/ammoniated plant food. Lebanon Extra is ideal for use in row applications where nutrient safety and consistency is crucial to yields. And its homogeneous/ammoniated granules offer superior performance over so-called "Custom-formulated" blends.

A blend of raw materials can result in uneven feeding. Unlike homogeneous/ammoniated granules which deliver all the primary nutrients and micronutrients in each particle — ensuring even distribution for consistent performance.

WINTER MEETINGS BRING NEW IDEAS

Winter crop meetings can be more than just an exercise to get pesticide credits — and my experience this year suggests that you can often come away with some beneficial ideas.

I get to attend more meetings than the average person and often end up being on the program, but that doesn't mean I don't learn a few things along the way.

This year I picked up a number of good ideas. I thought I'd share a few of those ideas in this column.

One issue that I encountered was on using corn for grazing. You may recall the article published in the last Corn Talk on the demonstration conducted in Berks County last year. One concern I have had with the grazing corn idea is how can we reduce the costs of establishing the corn so that the feed production cost is comparable to other warm season annual grasses?

At the recent PASA (Pennsylvania Association for Sustainable Agriculture) conference I attended a session conducted by Bradford County dairy farmer Kim Seeley. They too had a good experience with using corn as a grazing crop. They planted corn into a 3-acre sacrifice paddock in their rotational grazing scheme where the cows had torn up the existing sod and manured the ground well in early spring. Then Kim came in and worked up the field and planted corn. He cultivated this piece to control weeds. He didn't get complete weed control but the cows cleaned up the weeds with the corn when the field was grazed. They ended up grazing the field in August and early September with the milking herd for 41 days.

They used no herbicide, fertilizer, or insecticide and a long-season corn hybrid for their area. This was the same time when corn silage was very expensive and grass was short around the state. They figured their out-of-pocket costs to produce a ton of dry matter were $9 per ton.

In mid-September, just as the cows were finishing up the field, they broadcasted rye in the stubble and ended up with a decent cover crop as well.

Another issue brought to my attention at one meeting was that of apomixis. You may ask what is apomixis and what does it have to do with me? Well, according to an article in The Economist recently, a group of American and Russian researchers received a patent for an apomictic corn plant. Apomictic plants reproduce asexually — unlike most plants, which produce sexually. Having apomictic corn could, in the long run, do away with the costly process of hybrid seed production and simplify the breeding program. The end results could be cheaper and better hybrids. On the other hand it might also be possible to save seed from apomictic corn and replant your own seed, which has some pros and cons associated with it. It is still unknown what the potential of these plants are but scientists are studying the genetics of the apomixis to see if it can be incorporated into modern and productive corn lines.

Another interesting session I attended this winter was also at the PASA conference. There the topic was organic grain production and marketing. According to one Midwest grain analyst, overseas concerns over genetically modified organisms (GMOs) is strengthening the market for organically produced soybeans and corn, since this is one way foreign buyers can assure themselves that no GMOs are in their grain. He also suggested that premiums on organic grain would depend on the supply and with a greater supply, premiums would decrease.

On the production side, Rodale agronomist Jeff Moyer and John Hall from the Michael Fields Institute in Wisconsin both discussed how they have been using a corn-soybean-wheat/clover rotation to produce organic grain. They are generally using tillage and cultivation or rotary hoeing for weed control, no insecticides, and manure and legume N credits to help meet or supplement their nutrient requirements. John Hall noted that one of the challenges of this rotation has been a buildup of weed seeds from annual grasses that germinate in the wheat stubble. At the Fields Institute they developed a "chem lite" approach which relies on herbicides to control these weeds or to occasionally apply rescue treatment to the corn or beans where a weed problem comes through the mechanical control.

I encountered another interesting phenomenon at some of our extension meetings this winter. That was the attitude of various grain merchants to specialty corn, especially the high oil corn. Whereas in the past the grain industry has generally been reluctant to support this idea because of the need for separation and testing, now it seems as if the idea is gaining support.

These were just a few of the interesting ideas I encountered that come to mind. I was also able to visit with many corn growers around the state and renew our friendships and compare notes on the season. So for me, the winter meetings were much more than just a way to receive pesticide credits and I hope they were that way for you as well.

A FORCE Field Takes Corn To A New Level.

No other corn insecticide controls tough insect pests like rootworms, cutworms, wireworms and white grubs better than FORCE[®] insecticide. But that's just one reason why farmers who've experienced a FORCE Field of protection — in no till, minimum till and conventional tillage systems — stick with it year after year.

The other big reason is that FORCE is safe to birds, earthworms and you. Our 3G formulation lets you handle half as much FORCE as other insecticides. To save you time, money and cut your insecticide exposure in half.

The newer pyrethroid chemistry of FORCE gives you better, straighter stands than older, less effective insecticides. And FORCE doesn't interact with sulfonylurea herbicides.

Don't settle for less than a FORCE Field of protection. Ask your full service crop protection dealer/applicator for FORCE. Or call our hotline at 1-800-759-2500.

REVISITING HYBRID MATURITY ISSUES

Greg Roth
Penn State Agronomy
Associate Professor

Many growers throughout Pennsylvania were plagued by corn that dried down slowly last year and resulted in late harvest, high drying costs, and sometimes low test weight corn.

This has caused many producers to wonder if they are growing hybrids that are too late for their region. This is a very valid question. But we need to realize that the slow drydown last year was also related to a cool season and drought stress.

In many areas of the state, the growing degree days available for corn growth and development were less than normal. Growing degree accumulations from May 1 to October 1 for State College, for example, were about 2,150, about 300 GDDs less than normal for our area. To compound the problem, when corn experiences drought stress, silking is often delayed.

Last year we noticed about a 4-5 day delay in silking at Rockspring because of the drought. Basically, the corn plants went dormant and we effectively lost another 100 GDDs or so. So, we had about 2,050 GDDs to mature a 2,400 GDD hybrid in. It was not surprising that even our early planted hybrids failed to reach black layer and dried down slowly.

In our area, we have found that it generally takes about 2,400 GDDs to get a 105-day hybrid to black layer. Frequently, this is about all of the GDDs we get. We can grow longer season hybrids, say 110-day maturity, that need about 2,600 GDDs, but they often only reach half milk line. If we are harvesting for high moisture corn, or want to harvest in December, we can utilize these hybrids.

If we get a cool season, though, then the 105-day hybrid takes until December to dry down and the 110-day hybrids can sometimes result in wet corn and poor quality grain. These seasons are especially tough on grain producers who need to dry this corn or those who want to utilize it for ear corn.

We could also grow 100-day hybrids that mature in 2,200 GDDs or so and very rarely encounter maturity problems, but in warm years we may sacrifice some yield potential. Also consider, though, these early hybrids have other advantages: opportunities for planting wheat after harvest, drying corn under warmer conditions, and harvesting under generally drier soil conditions resulting in less soil compaction.

Several other factors complicate the hybrid maturity question. Probably more than any other state we have wide maturity difference within many counties. So on one side of the county you might be able to get away with a hybrid 5 to 10 days longer than on the other side.

Another factor is lack of standardization on corn hybrid maturity — a 105-day hybrid in one company is not the same as a 105-day hybrid in another company. Another factor is that we rarely get a normal year — and it is easy to let what happened last year dictate your decision too heavily.

A fourth factor to add to the confusion is that seed company ratings for hybrid GDD requirements are often higher than their actual requirement by 200 GDDs or so — many of the 105-day hybrids have a GDD rating of 2,600.

So how can we try to make a better decision on the maturity of hybrids we grow? First, decide if this is an issue for you. If you have not had trouble with slow drydown or test weight in the past few years, then you're probably all right. If you have, then consider evaluating some earlier hybrids in your mix.

One good way would be to estimate the GDDs available in your area. Next try to match your real hybrids GDD needs with the available GDDs. Also consider a spread of maturities to help offset the risk associated with warm or cool seasons. A good suggestion might be 20 percent that always mature (early season), 60 percent that usually mature (medium season), and maybe 20 percent that sometimes mature (full season). Then adjust that based on your own operation. If you harvest all grain and test weight is a critical issue, move more toward the early hybrids. If you sell high moisture grain and can tolerate more risk, perhaps you can move toward the fuller season hybrids.

Also start to do a little maturity monitoring on your own. Are the hybrids you are growing reaching black layer regularly? If not, then you are likely near or past your limit on maturity for shelled or ear corn harvest. Are you encountering other problems associated with late harvest — soil compaction, late-planted wheat, or difficulty completing harvest before the snow flies? Are you not seeing a yield advantage to the longer hybrids? If so, these signal a move toward an earlier maturity.

Corn maturity decisions are not always as simple as they should be. Take time to re-evaluate your situation. Don't make knee-jerk reactions. Base your decisions on sound observations and long-term weather data.

Use in Fall

Versatile tillage tools such as Brillion's Soil Commander allows the use of Chisel Shanks or Deep-ripper Shanks to break up soil compaction. Front disk gangs and optional rear leveling disks cut residue, breaks clods, level the field and prepare the field to absorb moisture from melting snow and to reduce soil erosion. Brillion's Field Commander combined with a Brillion Pulverizer excels at creating the perfect seedbed for spring planting. C-Shanks or S-Tine Shanks leave a uniform mixture of soil and surface residue for the most efficient chemical incorporation. The X-Fold Pulverizer (shown below) breaks up clods, firms the soil without compacting, eliminates air pockets in the soil and levels the soil for optimal seed placement. For less time in the field and better yields, go Brillion.

Budget Request Reflects Increased Funding For Major Crops Research

ST. LOUIS, Mo. — The $56 million included in the Clinton Administration's 1999 budget request for plant genomic research is welcome news for the corn growing industry, according to National Corn Growers Association (NCGA) officials.

"We're elated the president's proposed budget request increases research funding in the strategically vital area of plant genome research which is money well spent as an investment in America's agriculture efforts to meet the challenges of the next century," said Ryland Utlaut, NCGA's president and a corn grower from Grand Pass, Mo.

NCGA officials indicate that the requested funding for the following research programs, if approved, will be beneficial to unlocking valuable plant DNA knowledge for potential use by the corn industry:

- $40 million for the National Science Foundation (NSF) Plant Genome Initiative. Last year, the NCGA worked closely with Senator Kit Bond (R-Mo.) to successfully gain an initial $40 million appropriation for this program. If approved, this budget request will ensure the continuation of this valuable initiative.

- $10 million for a new food genome competitive grants program requested by the Secretary of Agriculture Dan Glickman and his science advisers.

- $3 million increase in genomics funding under the National Research initiative competitive grants program.

- $87 million for the NSF's Knowledge and Distributed Intelligence Program. This request reflects a $25 million funding increase from last year's budget. These funds will be used for developing bioinformatics, which will manage the information derived from genome research work and for functional genomics which discovers the function of genes.

"We feel these proposed budget increases reflect NCGA's focused lobbying efforts during the past two years which have earned us the well deserved reputation as the champion of genomic research on Capitol Hill," said Colorado corn grower Tim Hume, an NCGA board member.

NCGA will continue to work with the Administration and Congress to ensure that plant and animal genomic research obtains sufficient funding levels so America's agriculture industry can develop the necessary tools to meet the challenges of the 21st Century.

WASHINGTON, D.C. — U.S. agricultural exports reached $60 billion in 1996 up 50 percent since 1990. This increase was made possible by aggressive expansion efforts in overseas markets

"But we cannot stand still," said Alex Jackson, USFCA director of trade relations. "While other countries are negotiating new trade agreements to reduce tariffs, abolish subsidies and offer trade benefits into the next millennium, the United States is lagging behind. That is where fast track comes in."

Agriculture still suffers from the highest level of trade distortions in the world economy. If the United States doesn't continue to participate in forming new trade pacts and writing future trade rules, then producers, processors and exporters are going to be at a competitive disadvantage in the upcoming millennium. Fast track is needed so the United States can address high tariffs, unfair trade practices and subsidies, and pursue opportunities for market-opening trade agreements in Latin America, Asia and elsewhere.

If fast track authority was approved, it would give the United States the credibility it needs to negotiate tough trade deals. "Our partners would then know that any agreement made wouldn't be altered by Congress after the fact," said Jackson. "Congress would vote on the final agreement, but not be able to modify it, and that is the key."

Most countries will not negotiate with the United States unless the President has fast track authority. Every President since Nixon has had fast track authority, but since it expired three years ago, the United States has missed out on more than 20 separate negotiated trade agreements, denying important economic opportunities to businesses and workers alike.

"What we have to remember here is the key issue is trade and we are playing catch-up to agreements we didn't write," said Bill Archer, chairman of the House Committee on Ways and Means. Countries all over the world are negotiating agreements to create regional trading blocs that will grant preferential trading rights to that bloc's members.

The Andean Community countries (formerly the Andean Pact) are negotiating with MERCOSUR to create a commercial integration agreement with zero tariffs on some products and reduced tariffs on others.

"They are calling this agreement the South American Free Trade Agreement (SAFTA)," said Jackson. "To gain access to these countries, the United States must enter into negotiations with these trading blocs, but we will be left short without the power of fast track."

In April 1998, negotiations for the Free Trade Area of the Americas (FTAA) will begin at the second Summit of the Americas in Santiago, Chile. Meanwhile, WTO members agreed to begin negotiations on the next phase of agricultural trade liberalization at the end of 1999. These negotiations are the best chance U.S. agriculture has to reduce tariffs, open new markets and delete unfair practices.

"This is the time to act," Jackson said, "Support begins at the grass-roots level. We are asking people to let their elected officials know about the importance of fast track and why it needs to be approved now. Without it, U.S. agriculture will be at a serious disadvantage."

Price Wars

With the advancement in technology, traditional herbicide programs are changing directions or prices in order to stay competitive.

Several companies have drastically reduced herbicide costs (especially in the soybean market) and are offering enticing rebate programs and special incentives if purchasing products for several crops.

Use wise judgment in deciding the best programs for you.

DowElanco changed its company name to Dow AgroSciences. Its products and services will remain the same.

New Products and Updates: Labeled Accent Gold (DuPont) is a new product that contains nicosulfuron, rimsulfuron, flumetsulam, and clopyralid. In general, it is similar to Basis Gold except Hornet has been substituted for atrazine. This product is targeted for producers who like the concept of Basis Gold but do not want the atrazine.

Accent Gold will provide broadspectrum control of most weeds that are emerged at the time of application, with some residual control. The injury potential to corn will increase if environment or cultural practices place the crop under stress. It will be available for the 1998 growing season, however there will be limited supplies in the Northeast.

Basis 75DF (DuPont) will soon have a label change for preapplication for lambsquarters. The use rate will be increased to 1/4 ounces per acre from 1/8 ounces per acre. This rate increase should provide more consistent lambsquarters control when preapplied. We have not evaluated this higher rate and corn injury may be a greater concern.

Broadstrike+Dual (Novartis) will be marketed and serviced only by Novartis beginning in 1998. This product has a reduced rate program when tank mixed with Bicep II. For medium soil texture, apply 1.5 to 1.75 pint per acre of Broadstrike+Dual plus 2 pints per acre of Bicep II as a pre- or early post- (<2 tall corn) treatment. This program was effective where triazine-resistant lambsquarters and velvetleaf were the predominate problem in our trials in 1997. The reduced rate of Broadstrike should improve corn safety; however, still avoid using this product when cool-wet early season crop stress is a concern. Refer to the label for additional application and restriction information.

Exceed 57WG (Novartis) will have some new crop rotation restrictions beginning in the 1998 season (that is, plant only corn, small grains, or STS soybeans the following season). These changes are due to carryover problems to soybeans on certain soil types and in dry weather this past season in some Midwestern states. There have been few reports of problems in Pennsylvania or the Northeast. Also, Novartis will have a new product similar to Exceed called Spirit 57WG that contains a lower ratio of prosulfuron (Peak) to primisulfuron (Beacon). There will be a 10-month rotation restriction for soybeans south of I-80 and an 18 month restriction north of I-80. EPA registration is expected for Spirit in time for the 1998 growing season.

Field Master 4.25L (Monsanto) is a prepackaged burndown/preemergence herbicide that contains glyphosate (Roundup Ultra), acetochlor (Harness), and atrazine. It provides initial burndown and residual control of many common grass and broadleaf weed species. The application rate is 4 to 5 quarts per acre. It can be spiked with other corn herbicides to improve consistency of weed control (i.e., TR weeds).

Poast Protected corn (BASF/seed companies) was formerly known as SR (sethoxydim resistant) corn hybrids. Poast Protected corn hybrids allow postemergence applications of Poast or Poast Plus herbicide to corn. When tank-mixing with Marksman or Banvel/Clarity, include 1-2 quarts UAN or 1-2 pounds of ammonium sulfate per acre in the spray solution. Do not add crop oil concentrate or methylated seed oil as severe crop injury may occur. Also, do not apply other post-grass herbicides (e.g., Select, Fusion, Fusilade, Assure II) to Poast Protected corn hybrids, otherwise, crop injury will result.

Pending EPA Registration: Aim 40DF (FMC) is a new postemergence, contact-type, broadleaf herbicide containing the active ingredient carfentrazone. It is from the same chemical family as Authority soybean herbicide. It has activity on common annual broadleaves. It will likely be tank mixed with.

atrazine to provide more consistent control. Aim is expected to receive EPA registration by late 1997 or early 1998.

Balance 75WDG (Rhone Poulenc) is a new preemergent herbicide containing the active ingredient isoxaflutole. Isoxaflutole is a pigment inhibitor that controls a wide number of weed species including velvetleaf, lambsquarters, pigweed, common ragweed, smartweed, and nightshade, as well as some grasses. The application rate range is between 1.5 to 2 ounces per acre. In most situations, Balance will need to be tank mixed with a preemergence grass herbicide to improve grass control. It provides good weed control in both conventional and conservation tillage systems. Some corn injury has been observed on coarse textured soils or situations of early season stress (e.g., compacted areas), so follow appropriate label precaution. Do not apply Balance to sand or loamy sand soils where the water table is less than 25 feet deep. Balance has a 6-month crop rotation interval for all crops. Balance herbicide is expected to have EPA registration by spring 1998.

Distinct 70WG (BASF), coded BAS 662, is an experimental postemergence herbicide that contains a new growth regulator-type herbicide (diflufenpyr) plus dicamba (Banvel/Clarity). This herbicide interferes with plant auxin balance and causes susceptible weeds to bend, twist, and die. It is effective on many types of broadleaf weeds and provides some suppression of certain annual grasses (herbistatic). It is a more active herbicide than Banvel or 2,4-D alone. Distinct is expected to be commercially available by the 1999 growing season.

Harness/Balance (Monsanto/Rhone Poulenc) is an experimental premix of acetochlor (Harness) and isoxaflutole (Balance) for preemergence application. Both Monsanto and Rhone Poulenc anticipate having a prepackaged product of isoxaflutole and acetochlor, however, each will contain a different ratio. The addition of Harness improves grass control and enhances activity on small seeded broadleaf weeds. It is not expected to be commercially available until the 1999 growing season or later.

Liberty ATZ (AgrEvo) is a new prepackaged product being developed that contains glufosinate and atrazine. It will be used in Liberty Link or glufosinate-resistant corn hybrids only. Liberty ATZ is expected to be available for the 1999 growing season.

Pinnacle 25DF (DuPont) will be labeled for early post application in corn. The rate will be ¼ ounces per acre and applied from the 2 to 6 corn leaf stage (<6 collars). Pinnacle will provide good control of velvetleaf, pigweed, lambsquarters, smartweed, and mustards. Do not use if Counter insecticide has been applied. The Pinnacle corn label is pending EPA registration and should be available for the 1998 season. Roundup Ready corn hybrids (Monsanto/DeKalb) will be commercially available from DeKalb by 1998.

They will allow over-the-top applications of Roundup Ultra to corn. A typical program will include the use of a residual preemergence herbicide (e.g., Harness (Xtra), Bicep II, Surpass (100), Guardsman, etc. at planting followed by an application of up to 32 fluid ounces per acre of Roundup Ultra, if necessary to clean up any escaped weeds before corn reaches 24 inches tall. Another option would be to apply an early postemergence tank-mix treatment of Roundup plus a residual herbicide.

During this first year, supplies of Roundup Ready corn will be limited. Initially, it is expected that about one million acres worth of seed will be available nationwide. It is anticipated that there will be five to six DeKalb corn hybrids available; of those hybrids, possibly two will be suitable for the Northeast. A technology premium will be charged on each unit. Some foreign markets have not yet approved Roundup Ready corn imports but are expected to by early 1999.

New Products and Updates: Labeled:

Authority Broadleaf (FMC) and Canopy XL 56.3DF (DuPont) are premixes of Authority (sulfentrazone) + Classic (chlorimuron). Both products provide control of annual broadleaves such as lambsquarters, pigweed, velvetleaf, cocklebur, smartweed, nightshade, jimsonweed, morningglory, and nutsedge when applied preemergence. Like Canopy, application restrictions apply if soil pH is greater than 6.8. In PSU research, Authority has provided consistent control of several broadleaves, including nightshade. Both Authority and chlorimuron can injure soybeans especially in course textured soils or due to early season stress (e.g., excessive rainfall), so be sure to follow all label guidelines.

FirstRate 84WDG (Dow AgroSciences) contains the active ingredient cloransulam-methyl and is an ALS inhibitor herbicide. It is a broadleaf herbicide that controls pigweed, velvetleaf, ragweed, cocklebur, and morningglory when applied either pre or post-emergence. FirstRate received EPA registered in the fall of 1997.

Matador 0.88E (FMC) is a post-grass herbicide that contains the same active ingredient as Assure II. FMC reached an agreement with DuPont to market quizalofop under the name of Matador. Application rates and other restrictions are very similar to Assure II.

Skirmish 25DF (FMC) is a postemergence broadleaf herbicide that contains the same active ingredient as Classic. FMC reached an agreement with DuPont to market chlor-imuron under the name of Skirmish. Application rates and other restrictions are very similar to Classic herbicide.

Steel 2.59E (Cyanamid) is a prepackaged preemergence herbicide containing pendimethalin (Prowl), imazethapyr (Pursuit), and imazaquin (Scepter). It control many broadleaf and grassy weeds commonly found in Pennsylvania. The application rate for Steel in all tillage systems is 3 pints per acre. Be aware of crop rotation restrictions.

Pending EPA Registration: Authority OnePass (FMC) is a preemergent herbicide composed of Authority (sulfentrazone) and Command (clomazone). This product provides control of many annual grasses and broadleaves. FMC is working at improving the formulation of this product, so it should be marketed within the next year or two.

Expert 75WDG (Novartis) (CGA277476; oxasulfuron) is a postemergence experimental sulfonylurea (ALS inhibitor) herbicide. It provides control of many annual broadleaf weeds in soybeans. Expert is short-lived in the soil and should not interfere with crop rotations. Novartis awaits EPA registration of Expert, but expects to market it for the 1999 season.

Liberty 1.67L (AgrEvo) contains the active ingredient glufosinate. It is a broad spectrum herbicide (Roundup/Gramoxone-like) for use on Liberty Link or glufosinate-resistant corn and soybean varieties only. This program provides broad spectrum control of annual broadleaves and grasses. Tank mixtures and sequential applications may be required, especially in corn. Liberty Link corn and soybeans received registration from EPA in January 1997. Liberty Link soybeans should be available in 1998.

Python 80WDG (Dow AgroSciences) contains the single active ingredient, flumetsulam (Broadstrike), which is an ALS-inhibitor herbicide. Python WDG provides preemergent control of common broadleaf weeds. It will mainly be used as a spike in tank mixes to provide control of triazine-resistant lambsquarters and pigweed, and to enhance the control of velvetleaf and smartweed. Apply Python WDG at 0.89 to 1.33 ounces per acre. Avoid using Python pre when cool, wet early season corn stress is a concern. Consider weed resistance management strategies that include rotating away from ALS-inhibitor herbicides. Python has EPA approval and will be marketed in 1998.

Pending EPA Registration: Action (Novartis), coded as CGA248757 (fluthiacet-methyl), is a postemergence contact-type herbicide that provides excellent control of velvetleaf, but also has activity on some other broadleaves. Action will most likely be tank mixed with other products or be sold as a premix to increase the weed spectrum. Novartis awaits EPA approval for Action but expects full marketing by the 1999 season.

Axiom 68DF (Bayer) contains the active ingredients thiaflumide + Sencor, and is a preapplied product that will be used in corn and soybeans.

Thiaflumide is similar to Dual, Lasso, etc., and is applied at low use rates (0.5 pounds per acre). Axiom will control foxtail, crabgrass, barnyardgrass, and panicum. Axiom does not have EPA registration yet.

Magnum (Novartis) is a new formulation of metolachlor that will be incorporated into the Dual and Bicep line of products. It is a more active form of metolachlor; therefore less product is required per acre (e.g., 1.26 pint Magnum = 2 pints Dual II). These new Dual Magnum and Bicep Magnum products also will contain the corn safener. It controls the same weed spectrum as previous Duals or Biceps. The Magnum herbicides will not be marketed in the Mid-Atlantic region until at least the 1999 season.

USDA Figures Validate NCGA Warning On Competitive Edge

Gary Bradley
National Corn
Growers Association

The most recent figures released by USDA — which paint a gloomy picture for grain and soybean exports — validates a recent prediction made by a National Corn Growers Association (NCGA) transportation task force on foreign competition and the competitive edge held by the U.S. in the world corn export market.

In figures released recently, USDA lowered corn exports by 125 million bushels to 1.625 billion bushels — 400 million less bushels than last fall. Even at these levels, it is important to remember that the U.S. still accounts for almost 70 percent of the world trade in corn and will continue to be the dominant player in the world market.

According to John Green, NCGA's director of production and education, export demand for now seems to have gone to the competition — Argentina and, to some degree, China.

"Argentina had a good crop last year and is projected to have a record crop this coming year," Green said. "This is adding to world stocks."

Compounding the Argentina numbers, he noted, is the fact that approximately six of every 10 bushels raised in Argentina must be exported since that country has little domestic feed or processing demand.

"The Argentines know the value of the export market and that's why they are concentrating on being more efficient exporters and investing in their infrastructure," said Green. "Two weeks ago Argentina was reported to be ready to sell into U.S. markets in California and the Southeast."

He added that the NCGA task force saw this as a potential threat as far back as last March when it asked USDA to study how Argentina's river improvements would impact U.S. business.

A formal USDA study is under way. On the plus side for corn growers, USDA's projections recently increased food, seed, and industrial use by 20 million bushels.

"Our own domestic demand led by feed use and processing has bid corn away from export markets into domestic use," Green noted. The U.S. still holds a competitive advantage in one world market for corn — meat exports. "We still have, and will continue to have, a decided advantage in producing large quantities of high quality, competitively priced pork, beef, and chicken," Green said.

Alfalfa
Pending EPA
Registration:

Select 2E (Valent), a post-grass herbicide that contains clethodim, is labeled for use on soybeans. Valent awaits registration from EPA for use of Select on alfalfa. Select provides good control of annual and certain perennial grass species and should be a good addition to alfalfa.

Raptor 1E (Cyanamid) is a post-emergence broadleaf and grass herbicide that is labeled for use on soybeans. It is similar to Pursuit but more active on lambsquarters and ragweed. Cyanamid has applied for EPA registration for Raptor (imazamox) use in alfalfa and expects approval within two years.

Harvest Aids Labeled:

Roundup Ultra 4S (Monsanto) is labeled for use as a harvest aid in alfalfa, corn, sorghum, soybeans, and wheat. Follow appropriate application rate and timing restrictions for the respective crop.

Gramoxone Extra 2.5S (Zeneca) can be used to dry weeds prior to soybean harvest. Follow application rate, timing, and feeding restrictions.

A Product Update From MONSANTO

Master™ The first complete

Field Master™ herbicide is the first complete corn herbicide that provides both the best burndown plus broad-spectrum, season-long residual control of grasses and broadleaves.

ECONOMICAL GIVES YOU:

- The powerful combination of burndown and residual control in one herbicide.
- Broad-spectrum, shoots-to-roots burndown of weeds up to six inches tall.
- Control of the broadest spectrum of weeds, plus proven control on the largest number of grasses and broadleaves.

- More complete control of tough grasses and broadleaves compared to Extrazine® and Bicep® II.
- Added convenience. Field Master is complete and premixed, so it requires only one application for minimum-till and no-till fields.

FACTS:

- Field Master provides the best burndown.
- Field Master provides the best residual control.
- When a grower switches from Extrazine to Field Master, there's no need to change current management practices.
- Field Master offers burndown performance that Bicep II doesn't have.
- Field Master also provides unmatched residual, broad-spectrum control all season long.

By combining burndown with a residual, Field Master provides lasting control and helps fields start clean and stay clean.

is designed to give growers better performance in limited tillage operations from no-till to stale seed bed situations, or as an "Aide to Tillage".

"Aide to Tillage"

Large weeds left on the surface or only partially buried after 1 or 2 tillage passes often grow back. These show up as complaints later in the season. Growers, who till ground can utilize one tillage pass before planting to save time and get back on schedule. FieldMaster will kill the remaining green weeds lying on the surface.

BENEFITS:

- Broad spectrum burndown and residual weed control.
 - Fewer tillage passes → helps growers get back on planting schedule
 - One product to spray → treat more acres with less mixing hassles
- Better residual control in a broad range of weather conditions.
- Outstanding crop safety.

ECONOMICAL

- No need for additional surfactants.
- Weed & Feed in one operation.
Apply in 10 to 50 gallons/acre 28%N
- Rainfast in 1 to 2 hours.

Renewables Industry Vision Predicts New Uses For Corn, Soybeans

LONG BEACH, Calif. — The raw materials used to manufacture bumpers on cars, carpet fibers, and plastic packaging material will soon originate from corn and soybeans produced by America's farmers.

The markets for these products and others have led growth industries such as chemical, biotech, and wet-mill processors to closely study tapping the tremendous unused potential of renewable corn and soybean crops as future production and energy resources. An industry-led, long-range strategic vision was announced by members of a unique public/private coalition to launch a Research and Development (R&D) partnership to begin making this vision a reality.

"The federal government supports this strategic vision which unites industry to potentially invest millions of dollars in research and development of new products and processes which use renewable plant and crop-based resources," said Colorado corn grower Tim Hume, a member of the National Corn Growers Association's (NCGA) Corn Board.

"The resulting research and development investments by government and private industry partners involved will stimulate new initiatives and generate more use and greater demand for renewable crops like corn and soybeans which is welcome news for this country's corn and soybean growers," said Hume.

"The use of agricultural products — a renewable resource to make consumer goods and to fuel major industrial activities — will cut costs, require less energy, and reduce waste," said Secretary of Energy Federico Pena.

The NCGA initiated and led the efforts involved to develop the Plant/Crop-Based Renewable Resources 2020 Plan with a broad-based coalition of U.S. agricultural, forestry, and chemical industry members. Known as the "2020 plan," it serves as a strategic vision to developing greater industry usage of renewable plants and crops, trees, and agricultural wastes for chemicals, materials, and other products.

Major industry publications support this view. In a recent edition of Chemical and Engineering News, the editors offered their forecast of what will happen in the chemical industry. They expect that plants rather than fossil resources will become the primary feedstock for oils and plastics.

This vision recognizes that sustaining U.S. economic growth depends on having a secure supply of raw materials and that additional renewable resources for industrial production and energy needs must be accelerated. It also takes into account the growing trend toward partnerships between government and private industry to funding national R&D initiatives.

R&D results should in turn create new business ventures, more jobs, and develop environmentally-friendly renewable energy and chemical sources to fuel domestic core manufacturing capabilities.

"This is a significant effort toward developing a unique and exciting relationship between federal agencies and the private sector," noted Energy Secretary Pena.

"This new agreement is critically important to American agriculture," said Secretary of Agriculture Dan Glickman. "The U.S. Department of Agriculture's research program has a proud history of developing new technologies that have added significant value to commodities and created economic returns benefiting all Americans."

"We believe that developing plant and crop-based renewable resources provides a viable alternative to the current dependence on non-renewable diminishing fossil fuels. Developing these home-grown resources can contribute to our economic growth and national security," said Doug Faulkner, agriculture team leader in the Department of Energy's (DOE) Office of Industrial Technologies.

The strategy behind this planning has three phases. The first phase developed the 2020 Vision derived from industry goals. The second phase will draw a technology roadmap of industry priorities and milestones, which leads to the final phase of implementing research and development of new technologies created by industry partnerships. The plan envisions developing crop-based renewables infrastructure required to supplement industrial use of petrochemicals. Vision goals include attaining fully integrated manufacturing capacity to win 10 percent of the basic chemical building blocks from renewable bioproducts by 2020, and a 50 percent market share by 2050.

Contributors to crafting the 2020 plan include industrial and commodity associations, major corporations, state agencies, and environmental groups. Industry members will lead the process to prioritize technology needs, develop strategies, which utilize new technologies, commit resources, direct R&D partnerships, and then use the results. The DOE's Office of Industrial Technology will facilitate the partnership process by coordinating industry participation, commit federal resources, provide access to national labs, and disseminate program results.

oping plant and crop renewables as additional sources of materials which can be used as industrial building blocks. It gives those involved direction to develop specific technical goals related to this plan. The next step is to integrate public and private industry's renewable crop and plant research efforts to meet our future needs," said NCGA's Director of Research and Business Development Dr. Todd Werpy.

The 2020 plan was unveiled during the General Session at this year's Commodity Classic, the combined convention and trade show hosted by NCGA and the American Soybean Association (ASA). Nearly 4,000 growers, government, and industry representatives attended this year's event. To obtain a copy of the 2020 Vision, call toll-free, (800) 363-3732.

New Corn Publications From Penn State

Mark Antle
Department Of Agronomy
Penn State

Five new corn related publications have recently become available from Penn State's Publications Distribution Center.

Summaries of each publication are listed below.

Agronomy Facts 52, "Potential for Narrow Row Corn in Pennsylvania," is a five-page fact sheet which summarizes five years of narrow row corn research at Penn State. The research has shown that corn silage yields typically increase by 5 to 10 percent when planted in 15-20 inch rows. The yield increase is somewhat inconsistent depending on a number of factors which are described in the publication. This fact sheet describes the changes that need to be considered in the management of insecticide, fertility, planting, and harvesting of narrow row corn. Considerations such as yield response to various plant populations and row spacings are also outlined in the

PENNSYLVANIA MASTER CORN GROWERS ASSOC., INC.

"Considerations For Double-Cropping Corn Following Hay In Pennsylvania," Agronomy Facts 56, outlines the pros and cons of planting corn following a first cutting of hay. This is a practice which some producers have found profitable, especially when the first cutting of hay is harvested as haylage. Management considerations such as hybrid selection, insect control, planting techniques, weed control and economics of double-cropping corn are all discussed in the fact sheet. Anyone who has ever experienced an infestation of burcucumber in a corn field will appreciate the research conducted by former Penn State Agronomy graduate student David Messersmith.

"Managing Burcucumber In Agronomic Crops," Agronomy Facts 59, contains information summarizing the results of David's research in controlling this pesky summer annual weed. Burcucumber management relies on a combination of preventative, cultural, mechanical, and chemical practices, all of which are discussed in the publication.

"Starter Fertilizer" (Agronomy Facts 51) describes different materials, rates, and application techniques used in starter fertilizers. This factsheet provides a overview of the fundamental concepts associated with using starter fertilizers.

"The Field Crop Weed Control Guide" is an annual publication containing updated information on herbicides. It is an easy to read manual with a layout similar to the "Penn State Agronomy Guide." The Weed Control Guide also contains a weed management section which discusses aspects of weed biology, scouting, thresholds, control practices, herbicide-tolerant crops, herbicide-resistant weeds, and post-emergence herbicide principles.

To obtain a copy of these publications, visit your local county cooperative extension office or contact the Penn State Publications Distribution Center at (814) 865-6713. The "Field Crop Weed Control Guide" costs $5.50 and the Agronomy Facts publications are free of charge.

CORN TALK NEWS

PENNSYLVANIA MASTER CORN GROWERS ASSOC., INC.

E.U. Agriculture Commissioner Promises GMO Action

WASHINGTON, D.C. — European Agricultural Commissioner Franz Fischler told the European Council recently that he expects approval of major U.S. genetically modified corn by April.

Fischler's comments came after sharp criticism from German and Portuguese Agricultural Ministers over the long delay in approving corn varieties from the 1997 U.S. corn crop.

Portugal, an importer of U.S. corn, has been unable to purchase supplies from the United States this year because of the lack of consent of three pending applications for corn approval from Monsanto, Novartis, and AgrEvo. Instead, Portuguese corn purchases have come from Eastern Europe and South America.

The German government recently has begun to push for quicker GMO approval because of a fear that biotechnology jobs are being moved from Germany to other countries. Fischler said he hoped that new E.U. scientific committees would complete their safety assessment of the three corn varieties in March, and that final E.U. member and commission approval would follow shortly. He did not, however, project a timetable for approval of new corn varieties which may be planted in the 1998 U.S. corn crop.

In meetings with CRA recently, representatives of the European consumer affairs directorate predicted scientific committee review may not be complete for at least two months, which could push final approval of the new corn crops back until early to mid summer.

Earlier in the year, Dutch dairy industry firms withdrew their threat to discontinue use of U.S. corn gluten feed if the European Union did not quickly approve the new corn varieties. The dairy industry indicated that information about feed and environmental safety of corn gluten feed provided by the Dutch agriculture and environment ministries was sufficient to allow their continued use of corn gluten feed during 1998. They did, however, caution they may insist on European Union approval of any new corn varieties in the 1998 crop before extending their use of corn gluten feed after this fall.

USFGC World Feed Grains Demand Forecast Shows Strong Future For U.S. Exports

WASHINGTON, D.C. — "Economic hardships in our Asian markets may hamper U.S. feed grains exports at present, but the United States must remain active in these markets for when they come back. The 1998 Demand Forecast shows that they should do just that," said Ken Hobbie, president and CEO.

The Council's 1998 World Feed Grains Demand Forecast, released recently indicates that total world feed grains trade my increase to 139.1 mmt annually with U.S. producers well positioned to expand their market share.

"The Demand Forecast is an excellent tool for developing marketing strategies," said Hobbie. "What may be an issue today, may not be 10 years from now. We need to try to look for future market opportunities for U.S. barley, corn and grain sorghum and develop ways to capture those markets."

"Our Asian markets are having a tough year economically, which could affect U.S. feed grains exports. According to the Forecast, these markets could recover soon and again experience economic growth. The United States and the Council will need to watch these markets closely for when they do turn around.

"Mexico is another interesting market to watch. Two years ago, they experienced a major devaluation of their currency, the peso. Now the 1998 Demand Forecast says they could increase their imports by 62 percent in 10 years, from 6.2 mmt to 10 mmt in 2006.

"Looking at where things are now is not necessarily a solid indicator of the way things are going to remain," Hobbie said. "Successfully developing overseas markets for U.S. barley, corn and grain sorghum, and increasing profitability for U.S. producers, means looking as far down the road as possible. The Demand Forecast helps us do that."

Each year, The Council gathers extensive market information through its network of 11 international offices and worldwide staff. The Iowa State University Center for Agricultural and Rural Development (CARD) develops the initial production and price and trade projections, with the Sparks Companies and the Council adding further analysis and perspective.

The Council is a private, non-profit organization that develops and expands export markets for U.S. feed grains and co-products through a network of 11 international offices. The Council has staff in Latin America, Europe, the Middle East, Africa and Asia. Support for the Council comes from barley, corn and sorghum producers in 23 states and from leading agribusiness firms.

Both models feature wing-fold frame design that folds to an unbelievable transport width of 14'8", even with fertilizer tanks in place. And the telescoping tongue extends in transport mode for extra room between tractor and planter while on the road.

Both models let you adjust plant populations "on-the-go" using White's exclusive infinitely variable seed rate controller. So you can match seed rates to soil and nutrients available.

Cooling Of Foreign Markets Will Cut Grain Prices

RYLAND UTLAUT
President

National Corn Growers Association

As the Midwestern farmer anticipates warm weather and spring planting, the current economic turmoil in Asia may seem but a distant reality.

However, in today's global economy, what's happening on the other side of the world hits quite close to the farm.

The economic strength and stability of our Asian trading partners has a direct impact on the continued prosperity of the U.S. agricultural industry and our entire nation.

American agriculture is more than twice as reliant on foreign trade as our national economy as a whole, and agricultural exports now account for 30 percent of U.S. farm sales. One out of every five rows of U.S. corn takes a trip overseas. And corn growers depend on strong export markets not just for the grain we grow, but for value-added corn products such as meat, dairy, poultry, corn gluten feed, biodegradable plastics and corn syrup.

Robust international markets are especially important in this era of market-oriented farm policy. The domestic market for U.S. agricultural products is relatively mature and slow growing. Meanwhile, export markets are growing more than three times as fast as domestic demand, making them a key to the future health and expansion of the U.S. agricultural economy.

Not only is Asia the largest market for U.S. farm exports, it is also where demand had been expected to grow most. Last fiscal year, Asian nations purchased $23.8 billion, or nearly 42 percent, of the $57.3 billion in agricultural products exported by the United States. South Korea, Indonesia, Malaysia, Thailand, and the Philippines — some of the countries hit hardest by the continued turmoil in currency markets — account for 10 percent of our agricultural sales abroad. In these five countries, the adverse impact of the financial crisis on U.S. farm exports in 1998 is "conservatively estimated" at $500 million, according to the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

While it's too soon to tell what long-term effect the Asian situation will have, we've already begun to feel the ripples from across the Pacific. These include some deterioration in corn prices. The price for the March corn contract slipped below $2.60 per bushel just prior to the January USDA reports, down about 25 cents from early December. Export prospects for corn and other coarse grains have also diminished.

USDA now predicts that we will export 1.75 billion bushels of the 1997 U.S. corn crop. But that estimate is down 125 million bushels from a month ago and 2.5 percent from last year, a decline that is directly related to the upheaval in Asia. The situation poses problems that extend beyond grain. In the recent past, the economic success of the Asian Tigers contributed to a higher standard of living for consumers in the region. As a result, meat and poultry consumption increased, creating more demand both for U.S. livestock and poultry and for U.S. grain to feed livestock raised in Asia. But now, belt-tightening in Asia is bound to reduce consumption across the board. In its most recent supply and demand reports, USDA indicates that export prospects for beef, pork and poultry have already dimmed because of poor economic conditions and the dollar's strength against Asian currencies.

So what does this mean to U.S. farmers and consumers? President Clinton's 1992 campaign slogan was right: "It's the economy, stupid" — the global economy. It doesn't matter whether you're talking about Seoul or Sioux City, Jakarta, or Jefferson City — we cannot afford to bury our heads in the sand. We need to support prudent policies that help beleaguered Asian nations get back on their feet and also ensure long-term economic stability in the region.

Toward this end, USDA has already extended export credits to boost sales of U.S. agricultural commodities to the region and the IMF has made its loan packages contingent upon broad institutional reforms, including deregulation of trade in agricultural products.

In the next few months, isolationists will question the need for continued U.S. investment in the IMF. While this might normally be tough for farm country and Main Street to support, our own livelihoods may depend on the ability of the IMF to respond in times of economic crisis.

We have a choice. We can support efforts to speed recovery of the Asian economies in a manner that will lead to further liberalization of trade. Or we can look the other way and let these nations erect trade barriers and dump products on world markets in a misguided attempt to export their way out of crisis. Either way you cut it, the economic fate of our Asian neighbors is inextricably linked to our own.

Agriculture Secretary Dan Glickman summed it up recently at the Oxford Farming Conference in England: "As we step into a new century, we are crossing into a world where economic regulations are replacing military relations as the primary means by which countries deal with one another. The more we grow our economies in tandem, the more peaceful and universally prosperous our world will be, and the stronger customers we will have. Nowhere is this more true than in agriculture."

Value-Enhanced Corn Report

WASHINGTON, D.C. — "We have a commitment to educate endusers about the quality and reliability of U.S. feed grains," said Ken Hobbie, president and CEO of the U.S. Feed Grains Council (USFGC). "One way in which we meet that commitment is with the 1996-97 Value-Enhanced Corn Quality Report."

"Originally, the VEC report was developed for use in our market development efforts in Japan, where educational and trade servicing efforts work to increase customers' familiarity with the availability and quality of specialty corn grown in the United States. We translate the VEC report into Japanese and this year have added a Spanish translation as we have seen the number of requests for VEC information increase in the Mexican and Latin American markets. VEC is becoming an important part of the export equation — profiting the U.S. corn grower at the same time high-volume exports are a critical part of the equation, too."

This year's report shows that traditional "specialty" corns such as white, waxy, hard endosperm/food grade and high amylose represent a small but growing market for VEC.

High oil corn, which has grown from virtually no acres in 1993 to an estimated 1,000,000 acres in 1997, is at the moment the fastest growing VEC product in the marketplace. The market potential for both high oil and nutritionally dense corn is very high, and along with markets for specified handling characteristics such as low stress cracks, represents the most significant growth potential for the VEC market.

The report also addresses the quality of the 1996 crop. The 1996 U.S. corn crop was 26 percent larger than the previous year, due to a 13 percent increase in harvested acres and a 12 percent increase in yield over 1995.

However, the near-record crop did not reflect optimal growing conditions. Average harvest moisture levels increased from 18.5 to 22.4 percent in 1996. The larger corn crop and higher moisture content caused an increase in the volume of corn dried — both on farm and commercially. Lower test weights due to incomplete crop development in some areas, were observed in sample tests, shipment data and survey responses; however, these lower test weights were not statistically significant for white, waxy, and high amylose corn.

The report includes corn storage practices, with producer respondents indicating the average length of on-farm storage was six months. Steel bins account for 89 percent of respondents' on-farm storage capacity, and 87 percent of the steel bins have aeration fans, critical for maintaining corn quality during storage.

Farmer premiums for the five value-enhanced varieties sampled ranged from $.15-.30 per bushel for high-oil varieties to $1 per bushel for high amylose corn.

The Council retained Ag Education and Consulting, Savoy, Ill., to conduct the second broad-based compilation of test results and analysis of the VEC market in the United States, which included a comprehensive survey of producers, elevators, and companies who produce and merchandise value-enhanced corn varieties such as white, high-oil, high amylose and others.

Biodegradable Corn Products Are A Hit In Japan

As a result of U.S. Feed Grains Council efforts, the 1998 Winter Olympic games in Nagano, Japan, will feature biodegradable plastic products made from U.S. corn.

The Council, the Hoshida Group, and ASA will display and use biodegradable plastic bags, flatware, cups and coated paper products at the Eco-Friendly Kentucky Fried Chicken booth located near the Olympic Ice Skating Rink. U.S. corn imports could increase by 7 mmt (275.8 mbu) as a result of Council biodegradable promotion in Japan.

The Olympics are not the only venue for biodegradable corn products. The Council's composting infrastructure development efforts in Japan — targeted at expanding the market for corn-based biodegradable packaging — have spurred the harmonization of separate composting initiatives within different divisions of Japan's Ministry of Food and Forestry (MAFF).

Discussions are moving forward among three Japanese ministries (MAFF, MHW and MITI) on establishing a harmonized pan-government scheme for organic treatment of compostable waste. This unprecedented cooperation improves the outlook for developing a broad-based biodegradable market, rather than smaller niche markets.

High Oil Corn Continues To Shine

When high oil corn's (HOC) popularity began to grow, the Council began marketing it to overseas customers, both old and new. A recent signing ceremony in Taiwan marked another milestone in this market development effort.

In October, a Taiwan feed mill signed an agreement to purchase 280,000 mt (11 mbu) of U.S. high oil corn between November 1997 and October 1999.

Since 1995, the Council's office in Taiwan and the world headquarters in Washington, D.C., have been working closely with U.S. suppliers and Taiwan feed millers to promote U.S. HOC.

"Our promotional efforts on high oil corn have included demonstrations and short courses," said C.M. Lynn, USFGC director/Taiwan. In addition, "a trade team that visited the United States introduced key Taiwan customers to high oil corn," said Kent Swisher, USFGC manager of international operations. "They visited a feed mill in Ohio and saw how HOC was handled. That was the first time that many team members had heard of HOC."

In Japan, the Council helped get HOC approved as a feed for swine and poultry and is working on approval for beef feeding. In Colombia, the top market for U.S. corn in South America, demand for HOC is increasing. Two major grain companies are currently contracting with U.S. corn farmers to produce more than 1.8 mmt (70.9 mbu) of HOC for export in 1998-99. According to the Council's Value-Enhanced Corn Quality Report, U.S. farmers planted 400,000 acres of HOC, in 1996/97. In 1997/98, the report estimates that to grow to one million acres.

Corn News In Colombia

El Nino has apparently caused many agricultural production problems in Colombia, forcing the country to initiate a substantial increase in imports over the last few months.

U.S. corn imports through September 1997 were close to 1 mmt (39.4 mbu) and with new Council marketing programs and estimates of decreased local grain production as a result of El Nino, corn imports are likely to rise to 1.6 mmt (63 mbu).

El Nino is presently affecting corn, sorghum and rice planting and the farmers' association has said that Colombia's feed grain production during the first part of 1998 will decline sharply. According to Colombia's seed association, seed sales are almost zero.

CORN TALK NEWS

PENNSYLVANIA MASTER CORN GROWERS ASSOC., INC.

The Minister of Agriculture said that if necessary he will support increased grain imports through the beginning of CY98. The Council's 1997 Pioneer International Agricultural Trade Fellowship Mission members found Colombian customers pleased with the quality of U.S. corn and very enthusiastic about high oil corn, all of which they source from the United States. They also heard during several meetings that corn and sorghum production is declining in Colombia, and that by the year 2000, Colombia could import 3.0 mmt of feed grains. HOC endusers in this region are willing to purchase more of this ingredient, and a key importing feedmill said that if there was more U.S. HOC available on the market they would buy it.

Egypt Initiates Use Of Corn Flour For Bread

Council work pays off again. Based on Council suggestions an Egyptian flour mill began using white corn in their bread production.

Currently, 50,000 mt (2 mbu) of white corn has been used with complete consumer acceptance. Additional market tests using yellow corn have been a success, with the yellow corn bread receiving higher marks nutritionally. The flour mills intend to expand their use of white and yellow corn in flour and bread production in the upcoming year.

A Japanese Network Helps To Promote Corn-Related Products

Corn flake consumption got a big boost in Japan from a 30-minute program on the Tokyo Broadcasting Station's breakfast program. Hiroko Sakashita, USFGC associate director/Japan, and Juri Noguchi, ATO public relations, were instrumental in getting the program, originally planned for five minutes, expanded to a half hour. The broadcast included views of a typical American family eating corn flakes, discussions with nutritionists of the benefits of U.S. cereals, and demonstrations of their convenience, concluding with the suggestion that Japanese consumers are missing a great breakfast option if they don't increase their intake of corn flakes beyond the current 200 grams per capita per year.
